It was WHALE of a weekend!

'IT'S A WHALE of a World' was the theme of the annual Sand Castle Contest held on Carmel Beach, and it was a whale of a weekend in Carmel, what with the craziness of the always-popular contest; festivities ending Fire Prevention Week, which included a fire station open house and noisy parade down Ocean Avenue; and the FOCUS party at Forest Theater, among others. A Monterey Jaycee (top) puts the finishing touches on "Carmel Whales for Ice Cream" sand sculpture poking fun at the city council; Clint Eastwood (center) models a Fire Prevention Week t-shirt which Carmel firefighter Tracy Zimmerman obviously admires; and The Bag Ladies (bottom, l-r), Patrick Allan, Donna Robinson, Rosemary Montgomery, and Marvin Biasotti, fortify themselves with 99-cent firewater before giving a socko performance at the FOCUS fundraising party. More photos and stories of Carmel's wild weekend inside. (Michael Gardner photos.)

Prescribed burns

Dear Editor:

The California department of Parks and Recreation is planning prescribed burns at Point Lobos Reserve and Carmel River State Beach. The Point Lobos burn will be a continuation of the program of promoting the growth of the native perennial grasses in the field at the north boundary of the reserve. This field has been burned during the fall of each of the last four years.

A two-acre plot between Carmel Meadows and the Bay School is going to be burned to provide data for the evaluation of the affects of prescribed fire on French broom. French broom is an exotic plant that will crowd other native plants out if it is given a chance to compete. The two-acre plot is predominantly broom.

A simple overpass

Dear Editor:

Due to the population increase in Carmel Valley, we have daily traffic jams on Highway 1. These driving conditions are the result of a generally accepted policy that allows for blind acceptance of all development plans.

The development that is being planned for Carmel Valley and for Point Lobos depends on a new freeway in Hatton Canyon. The new freeway will result in more population growth and more traffic. The traffic jams will always occur where there is continuous new development and the design of the new freeway at Hatton Canyon will not solve our problem at Highway 1. It will only augment the existing problem.

All we need at Highway 1 is a simple overpass like the new overpass at Robinson Canyon Road and Carmel Valley Road. On the other hand, our illustrious civic leaders on the Monterey County Board of Supervisors are not going to give us any choice in this matter of never-ending development.

A deplorable act

Dear Editor:

I'm writing in reference to the Valley Sage section and the article on mountain lion hunting.

Hasn't there been enough of man trying to gain control over his environment? Even when only thinking in terms of the immediate area there are several incidences that come to mind regarding exploitation and misuse of our natural resources.

Remember DDT (endangering pelicans, among other things), whale and otter hunting almost to extinction and sardine overfishing? These weren't so long ago, lest we forget. They should serve as examples of human mismanagement of our beautiful area. "Man" is constantly creating imbalances within nature and her creatures by imposing his laws, regulations and biases on what he sees as "right" for all.

I'm not an extremist. If a lion is seen stalking livestock, or in the process of capturing or killing one, then yes — shoot to kill. But I don't agree with the Department of Fish and Game's 10-day law that enables the lion to be hunted down and killed — after the fact. The fact that there is a decrease in land that mountain lions have to live on is in whole due to mankind. And I don't think we can assume the right to hunt them down when they've committed the "sin" of encroaching into "our" territory.

Mountain lions express the wildness and the past ruggedness of California in the remaining remote areas. When somebody chooses to have a large amount of uninhabited land and include livestock and domesticated animals on that land, then they must assume a certain amount of loss due to natural predators. Just as they would if a disease spread through their livestock and killed them. Or if a drought or cold snap endangered them. Those are a few of the natural occurrences that the owner would be helpless in controlling.

To give someone a 10-day "right" to kill a lion that supposedly killed livestock, is completely senseless. Not only might it be a totally different lion, but no matter how many studies there have been, there is no way of guaranteeing the fact that the lion is becoming too "populous" and needs to be "increasingly controlled."

As more and more ranchers apply for this permit where will the cut-off be? The Department of Fish and Game is essentially giving the go-ahead to hunt a native animal. Some people will undoubtedly misinterpret that and forgo the permit and/or not report the killed lion. Then how will the count of lions be monitored?

The hunted lion also could be pregnant, or have cubs in a den. Isn't it a fact that mountain lions mate for life? That would also cause the overall population to dwindle. The lion population might have "stabilized, if not increased" for now, but if the Fish and Game law continues to prevail, it might not remain that way.

Protect our coast

Dear Editor:

The California Congressional delegation gave up the annual moratorium protecting our coast from offshore oil drilling in exchange for Interior Secretary Donald Hodel's "tentative agreement" on a compromise opening 150 tracts to bidding. Then, after overwhelming support at the California hearings from essentially everyone but the oil companies, he reneged on the agreement and is now apparently compiling a "wish list" for industry without taking any environmental considerations into account.

A recent scholarly study, "Oil in the Sea," published by the National Academy Press, meticulously details the known research on oil spills and concludes in part: "... the potential impact ... cannot be estimated with confidence at this time ... the interaction ... is not well understood ... the effects of any given spill or input can be quite unexpected ..." etc.

It is ironic that "national security" is given as the reason for steamrolling ahead on oil leasing in the midst of an increasing oil glut, and that those working to protect our coastline and marine resources are portrayed as unpatriotic elitists trying to "lock up" urgently needed energy sources.

The facts are a different matter. Estimates show there is more than twice as much untapped oil onshore in California as offshore. Furthermore, a recent study by the National Audubon Society based on current resource estimates from the USGS and the Department of Interior shows that 94 percent of U.S. energy resources could be developed under current environmental restrictions.

National security would be much better served by prudently husbanding our reserves, doing the necessary research to mitigate the impacts of extracting them when the time comes that they are needed, and encouraging

Making book on the library

THE RESULTS of the city-sponsored survey on Harrison Memorial Library are quite clear: the citizens of Carmel do not want either a new building or expansion of the existing one.

In fact the option once championed by the city council — to close off and expand directly onto Lincoln Street — got the least support of all the alternatives in the survey. More people (12 percent) wanted to do nothing rather than build on Lincoln (11 percent). The council realizes this (even though they will have to certify the EIR as a technicality) and is prepared to support an acceptable alternative plan.

The big question in everyone's mind is: what alternative do you go with in order to satisfy not only the citizens, but non-citizen library users, a majority of the council, the library board, and even the library staff itself?

Now that it's practically a given that the Lincoln Street plan is out the window, there are several alternatives being bandied about. The alternative favored by 49 percent of the 1,390 respondents in the survey is as follows:

"Move some library services and materials to Sunset Cultural Center on a permanent basis. The existing library building would remain unchanged. No new building would be constructed with this alternative."

But what does support of this alternative actually mean? "Some" library services and materials is deliberately vague, and what does "on a permanent basis" mean? If the city decides to build a new library in the year 2005, will "some" services and materials remain behind? Again vague.

What it seems to imply, however, is that the citizens simply do not want any new building; that extra space can be made in the existing library without any extra construction...somehow.

The desires of the city's library users are well known. They like Harrison Memorial Library, it can almost be termed a certain fondness or attachment to the building. It's got character. It's so Carmel. But it's too damn small.

YES, A question in the survey did address the crowdedness of the library (Is the building too crowded for comfortable use?), with 42 percent saying no conservation. Instead, the current administration is forging ahead without adequate environmental safeguards, while at the same time trying to lower auto mileage standards and abolish energy conservation programs.

To protect our coast and encourage a sane energy policy, Congress must be urged to and 34 percent saying yes; but a fairly large percentage (20 percent) also saying "I don't know." A quick look around the library will tell you that things are a bit tight, but certainly not overcrowded or uncomfortable, unless perhaps you're one of the library staff members.

The staff is (literally) being worked into a corner, but is it necessary to construct a new building to accommodate them? No, but the desires of staff should at least be kept in mind, after all they do have a stake in what happens and are given the task of serving the public by the city. It would behoove the city (and benefit library patrons) to give them the best possible working conditions.

So what does this all add up to? The city has a difficult choice to make and most likely the decision will come down to a compromise that, it is hoped, will please all sides.

The basic points as we see them are these:

- One way or another room has to be made at the library, either by putting "some" services elsewhere or cutting back on such things as seldom-used materials.

- Harrison Memorial Library should remain unchanged, at least structurally.

- Splitting up the library (staff at one place, library at another) wouldn't make much sense. Either keeping everything under one roof, or at least only a block or two away, makes more sense.

- There is enough money in the coffers devoted to the library to implement virtually any of the acceptable alternatives.

At this point the alternatives that appear most attractive are ones forwarded by Councilman Robert Stephenson — to put only technical services at Sunset Center to make room at the library — and one now supported by Councilman David Maradei.

Maradei's proposal — to build a small annex with underground parking across the street from the library that can be expanded when needed — looks to be the best and most logical plan so far because it keeps all library services in one area of the city, provides more parking and prepares the city for future expansion when needed. It's a compromise, but one that should satisfy all sides involved and one the council should consider seriously.

One day a new library building will be needed, but for now the consensus is clear: Hands off Harrison.

Lots of talking, no action on Eastwood project

By MICHAEL GARDNER

CLINT EASTWOOD says he is eager to resume negotiations with the city over design plans for his much-maligned San Carlos Street retail and office complex, but he insists on specific council-recommended changes and some guarantee of approval before he invests more time and money in the proposed project.

Meanwhile, the Carmel City Council has released a four-page prepared statement that proposes another meeting with Eastwood. (The full text of the statement is printed verbatim on this page.)

Eastwood and the city council have escalated the verbal sparring for the past two weeks since the world-famous actor and Carmel resident decided to take his case to the public in a breakfast talk before the Carmel Business Association (CBA).

For two years Eastwood has vainly tried to win city approval of the proposed two-story retail and office complex proposed for the west side of San Carlos Street between Sixth and Fifth avenues.

Eastwood plans to build the complex on three sites just north of his Hog's Breath Inn restaurant. The Shell Fisher Gallery building would be torn down; one lot was occupied by the now-closed Nishi Nursery and a third property now is used for storage.

The city dislikes the modern design and believes the building is too tall and massive for Carmel. Twice the project has been rejected by the council. After the second denial earlier this year Eastwood's attorney, Brian Finegan, filed a lawsuit in Monterey County Superior Court.

The normally publicity-shunning Eastwood — abandoning some of the more inflammatory remarks he made at the CBA meeting Oct. 3 that publicly reopened the controversy that had been quietly awaiting court hearings — talked to the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook Oct. 11 about what it would take for he and the city to work out an acceptable compromise.

Eastwood claims that "I might as well be back to square one" without specific recommendations from the council and guarantees of approval if those suggestions are incorporated into the design.

"I just want something to avoid going back and starting all over again...Am I supposed to go back and redesign the plans and revamp the model? You can't do that on speculation," he said.

"If they say cut six inches here, three inches there and move back the top...If they say that, it will do the trick...I'll be back tomorrow," Eastwood explained.

EASTWOOD SAID he tried the com-

Council tells its story:

(Editor's note: The following is the full text of a written statement submitted by members of the Carmel City Council in response to Clint Eastwood's speech at the Oct. 3 Carmel Business Association meeting.)

"Mr. [Clint] Eastwood's recent comments before the Carmel Business Association are regrettable, for while his statements verbalize his opinions and frustrations in having his development denied, they do not fairly portray the efforts of representatives of the City to assist Mr. Eastwood and his agents in getting his project approved.

"Mr. Eastwood's project was initially denied by the City Council on May 15, 1984 because the proposal exceeded the City's height limits and did not meet the criteria of the General Plan regarding our village character. The City Council believed that a two-story wall of columns and glass on San Carlos Street better fit an urban metropolitan area than a shoreline village.

"These comments were made at the May 15 meeting so that Mr. Eastwood and his agents would know of the City's concerns in regards to the design and could incorporate those items into a resubmittal. The City Council believed that after three and one-half years of preparation, the citizens had expressed in the General Plan document the type of community that was desired and the Eastwood project of two-story columns and glass did not meet this expressed criteria.

"Upon resubmittal, the architect had only reduced the building height eighteen inches. No reduction in the two-story columns or glass. No effort was made to relieve the two-story wall effect.

"After the resubmittal had been denied by the Planning Commission, Council Member [Helen] Arnold, on her own initiative, personally contacted Mr. Eastwood and met him for lunch to discuss the problems with the project. This initiated another meeting between Mr. Eastwood and representatives of the City, which was followed up by a March 10, 1985 letter to Mr. Eastwood in which the City Administrator outlined the four design changes that should be considered so that the project could meet the General Plan criteria. Those four items were:

"1. The widening of the pedestrian court on San Carlos Street in order to give the project a more open character.

"2. The stepping back of the second promise approach in earlier discussions with City Administrator Doug Schmitz.

"I told him that you get together with your people and tell me what could go and what won't go. I guarantee you I'll have an answer in no time at all," Eastwood recalled of the conversation with Schmitz.

"I didn't want it to go this far (to court)," Eastwood continued. "This whole thing is completely unnecessary."

"The ball was put in their court and they didn't come back with it," he said. "They would rather go to court than sit down and talk about it in a conciliatory atmosphere."

Eastwood still thinks some kind of study session with the council could iron out the problems. In such a meeting, the council could point out its difficulties, ask for changes, compromise and vote on each individual point until the council is satisfied with the project.

Eastwood said it's important to get some kind of guarantee of approval because thus far the council has not even agreed on what portions of the design it dislikes.

"One person wants one thing and another person wants another. One person likes apples, the other person likes oranges. How am I supposed to know?," he questioned.

Normally one to try and avoid publicity, Eastwood says the council forced him into action.

"We were afraid of the publicity on it," he said in explaining why he didn't personally push the project earlier. "I don't like this happening. What do I have to gain by this?"

"They have taken a passive person and turned him into a political activist. It was not from any desire of mine," Eastwood continued.

He said he had followed the business-council controversies in the media, but pretty much stayed out of the battle at first. "I would read where one person would be denied and I would say, 'that's too bad' (but) seeing it first-hand is going to have more impact on you."

"When it happens to you, that's when you

Stephenson to oppose new building for the library

By MICHAEL GARDNER

IF CARMEL City Councilman Robert Stephenson has his way, the city will do exactly what it has been doing for the past 20 years on providing more space for Harrison Memorial Library — practically nothing.

In an interview last week, Stephenson provided a preliminary peek into his dissertation to be given to the council when it meets on the library issue at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 22 in city hall.

The council at that session is expected to certify the environmental impact report (EIR) for the proposed expansion of the library directly on Lincoln Street between Ocean and Sixth avenues.

The anticipated certification is basically a technicality since most of the council has agreed that the Lincoln Street expansion plan should be abandoned.

The council after certification of the EIR probably (will) launch into discussions of where and how to provide more space for the library.

A realist, Stephenson knows that his longtime goal of building an entirely new library building on the north field of Sunset Center is never going to win the hearts and votes of a citizenry in love with the Maybeck-style Harrison Memorial Library on Ocean Avenue.

Based on his analysis of the questionnaire, which indicates overwhelming opposition to any new library construction, Stephenson believes the logical course of action is to:

- Relocate all technical services and offices to Sunset Center, which will provide more space for the crowded library without the need for another building.

- Build an approximately 28-space, $35,000 surface-level parking lot on the northwest corner of Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue — site of the original annex plan. He has drawn plans that include public restrooms and 15-ft. of landscaping to surround and hide the parked cars.

- Construct a three-story parking garage on the north field of Sunset Center.

One thing is certain, the council is not without its alternatives. The most-discussed of these choices, sans Stephenson's suggestions, are:

- Develop a small annex building on the corner lots that could be added to later. Included in the plan are underground parking and public restrooms.

- Transfer the children's department to the Sunset Center bungalows.

- Pursue purchase of the Little Swiss Cafe building, which is adjacent to the library.

- Work with the county on building a new library at the mouth of Carmel Valley.

"I'M GOING to argue very forcibly that we don't do anything," Stephenson said.

"I'm going to support all of this with figures from the questionnaire."

Stephenson has prepared two charts encompassing his analysis of the key questions in the survey.

Stephenson utilizes the obvious answers, such as the overwhelming number of respondents who oppose a new building.

He also points out that 71 percent of the respondents indicated that closing Lincoln Street for the expansion would not be a "personal inconvenience" but only 11 percent stated they like that plan.

Another 42 percent stated that the library is not too crowded for comfortable use.

Stephenson said that some of the other answers that may slip by in the discussions also are meaningful when talking about parking and the library space issue.

The results of a question that asked how frequently citizens use the library revealed that 20 percent "never" and 31 percent "seldom" use the library.

To Stephenson, this response means that "when we talk about loyal library patrons, we are talking about less than half the citizens."

Eastwood and council willing to talk, but...

start going 'well, wait a second.' I didn't want any special favors, otherwise I would have pushed this thing through before McFarland," Eastwood said.

(Craig McFarland's now-open San Carlos Street Cottage Row project was approved two years ago on the same night the council initially denied Eastwood's proposal.)

EASTWOOD does praise planning commissioner Sandy Swain, who he says is the only city official who seems willing to work out a compromise.

"Ms. Swain has been terrific about trying to help out...She's the only one who has offered anything constructive. She seems to be the only one to want to resolve this," Eastwood said.

Eastwood's praise came following his receipt of a letter from Swain that expressed her disappointment that Eastwood apparently reneged on a promise of a compromise.

Swain told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook that prior to the Oct. 3 Carmel Business Association meeting

Eastwood told her that he would like to meet again.

But then, Swain said, she heard from city officials that Eastwood refused attempts to arrange a meeting between staff and his architect, George Brook-Kothlow, and his attorney, Brian Finegan.

This prompted Swain, who voted against Eastwood's proposed design twice, to write the following letter:

"Dear Clint: It was good talking to you last Thursday morning and I was especially pleased about your agreeing to my suggestion that you and Doug (Schmitz) have one more try at solving your problem thereby avoiding going to court.

"I went directly to city hall after the CBA meeting and told Doug of our conversation. He too was agreeable to having a meeting and contacted (City Atty.) Don Freeman to make the suitable arrangements.

"You can imagine my surprise and embarrassment when I learned your response was 'no way.' I feel a little like I've walked off the end of the plank taking my credibility with me and am going down for the third time. Help — make my day! Sincerely, Sandy."

"What she says is actually accurate," Eastwood said.

But, Eastwood pointed out that in his conversations with the city he was unable to get any guarantees so he did not see the sense in meeting again.

For her part, Swain insists that the offer to meet stands. "Everybody's willing to go back and kick it around," she said.

In their statement, council members offer to again meet with Eastwood, while also presenting their side to the story.

The council statement claims that it did present Eastwood with specific suggestions that, if incorporated in the design, could push his project ahead.

- "Utilization of a wood exterior.
- "Reduction in the amount of glass."

The statement claims that Eastwood only lowered the building height by 18 inches prior to resubmitting the design to the council. That 18-inch reduction actually brought the building back to within the height limits.

The council in its statement also explains a controversial offer by the city to pay for new design plans.

Describing a meeting July 1, the statement reads: "At that time four alternatives were discussed for the resolution of the lawsuit.

"One included the city paying for the drawing of concept plans as a resolution of the lawsuit. This alternative was an extraordinary measure, a last effort to constructively resolve the matter in the planning area rather than in the court and would assist Mr. Eastwood in getting a project approved.

"It was an approach to put our efforts into a constructive solution rather than into attorney's fees. This alternative to the litigation, as well as the other three alternatives, was rejected."

Prior to the release of the statement, the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook contacted Mayor Charlotte Townsend and Councilmen David Maradei and Robert Stephenson to get their views on the controversy.

"The whole thing makes me very upset," said Mayor Townsend in reference to Eastwood's remarks at the CBA meeting.

"I'm absolutely irritated that he would blame staff and name names...He needs to sit down with staff and talk this thing through — not go public."

The mayor said she voted against the project the second time because it was essentially the same design that had been previously rejected.

"We hoped to get alternatives from him. What he came back with was exactly the same plan, except the 18 inches...If something is turned down unanimously and they come back with exactly the same thing, except to lower the height limit, does that make sense?" the mayor asked.

Despite her strong words, the mayor did

City council unanimous

Sands project approved after four long years

By MICHAEL GARDNER

OUTSIDE THE newly-refurbished Carmel City Hall at about dinner time Tuesday evening, Robert and Bernice Little stood on the stairs in a long embrace, emotions having taken their toll four decades after the couple first honeymooned in a rustic lodge just down the street.

They fell in love with the town, and when the owner of the now long-gone Shell Station filled the gas tank for the broke newlyweds so they could get back home, Robert and Bernice Little knew that this village was the only place to live.

They packed up mom, who eventually bought and sold homes for $300 to $500 profit during the war years, and started a family insurance business.

At that time the Carmel Sands Lodge on the northeast corner of San Carlos Street and Fifth Avenue already was nearing its 20th year of operations, having been first built back about 1928.

One year later, in 1929, the city adopted its own constitution in the form of an ordinance that basically declared that business is subservient to residents.

Three of the four Little children were born in Carmel and they remain a tight-knit family. In 1958 the Littles bought Carmel Sands Lodge; it was the same year the city adopted a second ordinance that requires new motels to have 1,000 sq. ft. of space for each unit. The ordinance effectively halted all new motel development in town.

There are 11 owners of the Carmel Sands Lodge today — 56 years after its first unit was rented and 27 years since the Littles bought the lodge and what is now Simpson's Restaurant — and most of those are members of the clan.

The family first tried to rebuild the lodge four years ago, but the timing was bad, what with the revisions to the general plan underway and a growing anti-tourist mood in the city.

They withdrew, only to reappear two years ago with new plans to demolish the dilapidated 42-room hotel and 120-seat restaurant, and replace it with the same number of rooms, dining seats, plus the family insurance offices.

The Littles got the demolition permit rather easily, but the city continually rebuff-ed attempts for a use permit to rebuild the hotel.

The city was fearful of continuing what legalese calls a "non-conforming" use, so dubbed because the hotel did not meet the 1,000 sq. ft. per unit rule.

AFTER THE initial council rejection of their use permit application, the Littles chose to try again.

Parking, one of the key roadblocks, was settled when the Littles offered far more spaces than what currently is required.

But citing an "intensification of use" because of the insurance offices, the planning commission rejected the use permit application.

Once again, the Littles found themselves appealing to the council.

In an extraordinary move, the Littles huddled together and decided that the best way to get the project through was to drop the office use — the city's primary complaint.

That decision was delivered in the form of a letter to the city Oct. 3. It was the kind of compromise the city had been looking for.

And no doubt in the future the Littles' compromise will be used as an example by other developers — particularly actor Clint Eastwood and his proposed San Carlos Street retail and office complex — that with a little cooperation and compromise the council is willing to approve projects.

On Tuesday, the council, on a unanimous vote, gave the Little family their use permit.

The only voice of dissent rose from the audience in the form of ex-mayor, councilman Gunnar Norberg, who launched into a history of the battle to save the city from motel development.

After the vote, Norberg stood up and lamented: "I think it's the single worst decision any council has made."

The long road is not over for the Littles, not by any means — the city gets more crack at the project through design review. The nuts and bolts of getting the project underway now begins.

But for today at least, Robert and Bernice Little can hug themselves on the steps of city hall, nearly a block away from their first honeymoon cottage, knowing that their dream is that much closer to reality.

Pebble Beach Co. hires engineers for gate study

PEBBLE BEACH Co. has hired Bestor Engineers to conduct an analysis of possibly relocating the Carmel Hill and North San Antonio gates to Del Monte Forest.

That was revealed by the Carmel City Council Tuesday afternoon during its discussion of a plan to close North San Antonio Street at the Pebble Beach gate.

Later, Councilman David Maradei explained that the city and Pebble Beach Co. officials will meet sometime in mid-November to discuss the engineer's report.

Maradei said Bestor Engineers will study relocating both gates, including the feasibility of a council-backed plan to move the North San Antonio Street gate farther into Del Monte Forest.

The city believes that the current locations and number of lanes at the gates have often backed up traffic. They also fear that more development and completion of Spanish Bay resort will mean additional cars entering residential areas of Carmel.

The council also asked the planning commission for a recommendation on whether to order a $7,500 environmental impact report on closing North San Antonio Street.

In other action the council:

• Reluctantly told Crespi Avenue area residents that it has little legal recourse to stop a proposed residential care facility for the elderly. Councilmen Maradei and James Wright will meet with the residents, Assemblyman Sam Farr and the applicant to discuss the problem.

CUSD board meets Oct. 22

THREE MAJOR reports — on AIDS, transportation and Project 2000 — will be presented to the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education Tuesday, Oct. 22.

Trustees will meet at 7 p.m. in the middle school library, south side of Carmel Valley Road about one mile east of Highway 1.

The update on AIDS will be presented by a task force organized following the decision not to admit a Carmel River School fifth grader diagnosed with the fatal disease acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS).

The task force will recommend the formation of a district-wide health services committee that will suggest policies on all key health issues, according to Supt. Robert Infelise.

say she wants to try to work out a compromise and avoid court.

been open and remains open," she said.

"Everyone's going off being angry instead of saying what can we do to compromise on this thing," Mayor Townsend continued.

Councilman Robert Stephenson reiterated his position that the building probably would win his vote if the design is "less imposing on the street," the second story is "pushed back," the walkway is widened and less glass is incorporated.

Councilman David Maradei had this to say:

"It appears to me from the comments Mr. Eastwood made that he is not willing to negotiate a solution to the problem. I believe his final words were that 'it's in the hands of a magistrate'."

Maradei said Eastwood's stubborn refusal to compromise and work with the city has led to the rejection of his project.

"If Mr. Eastwood knew how to move his project through the process, he would not have had a problem...It requires the ability to make adjustments and compromise."

When asked what specific changes he would like to see in the building, Maradei responded: "It is not the position of the city council to tell him what kind of building to design. I believe we made our concerns clear — the size, the visual mass and density."

But Eastwood refused to compromise, asserts Maradei.

"Rather than do that, they returned to the city council with the identical project that was 18 inches lower. That was the only change he made in the design."

Maradei especially is concerned about the size of the building, which will stretch across three lots.

"One of the important characteristics this city has is that buildings are human scale," he said.

"We have made our position perfectly clear; the building is simply too massive and too big."

Maradei also is fearful that the Eastwood building — coupled with Cottage Row — will lure even more tourists off Ocean Avenue and on San Carlos Street.

"This building would be one of the main drawing cards in the city. It would shift the intensity of use off Ocean Avenue and onto the San Carlos Street corridor," he pointed out.

Maradei said the general plan requires the city to steer most of the tourist traffic to Ocean Avenue.

CLINT EASTWOOD was all smiles after his talk with the Carmel Business Association Oct. 3, but then again he was on friendly turf. Eastwood and the city continue a war of words over his project, but so far neither side has formally scheduled another negotiating session. (Mac McDonald photo.)

Maradei also points out that it is going to be more difficult to approve the building now because of the water ordinance.

The ordinance, intended to keep Carmel from exceeding its water allocation, states that no new building can be allowed if the new use will consume more water than the previous occupants.

The question is whether the closing of Nishi Nursery will offset the extra water the new building will consume since the art gallery and vacant lot use little.

No court date has been set for the appeal hearing. The case is in the "discovery" stage, which is when the two attorneys prepare their facts and share evidence prior to the hearing.

Finegan plans to argue the central points that the council is vague in its demands and that initial approval of the project by the planning commission gave Eastwood concept approval, which Finegan claims means that the city cannot force him to redesign the project.

It's decision time for council on library space

And, another interesting response is that less than half of the citizens own a car, yet 95 percent of the respondents say that parking is a problem in Carmel.

"Parking is a greater concern to our citizens than books," Stephenson said.

Plus, by a 48-42 percent margin citizens oppose any parking garages to be constructed as part of a library expansion, he said.

"What I hear is parking is a problem, but do not try and solve it with a library addition," Stephenson explained.

Stephenson called the space problems at the library "unfortunate" but said he can't "justify" spending $1 million for a new building the people "obviously do not want."

Instead Stephenson favors relocating technical services and offices to Sunset Center. Coupled with internal rearrangements, more space could be achieved.

Stephenson pointed out that the revamping of the circulation area already has helped provide more room. Other changes, such as weeding out seldom-used materials, already are underway.

Stephenson proposes to build the surface level parking lot with "in-lieu" fees — the funds collected by the city from property owners who are charged if they cannot provide adequate parking. There is about $350,000 in that fund.

THAT STILL would leave more than $300,000 in in-lieu fees — about 10 percent of what a three-level, nearly 400-space parking garage will cost.

Stephenson's idea for a surface level lot on the corner has been before the city previously, but always stalled until the annex debate could be concluded.

Mayor Charlotte Townsend for one hopes a decision can be reached Oct. 22.

"I hope we'll see the light at the end of the tunnel," she said.

"I think it's time to start making decisions. They're going to be unpalatable to some people, but we have to bite the bullet and do something," she said.

"One thing is for certain, the town is divided."

Mayor Townsend said she is still concerned about the adverse reaction to the original Lincoln Street expansion plans that were approved by the library board but opposed by the council.

Those plans were circulated and drew the irritation of the public and businesses. "Those plans were absolutely not acceptable to the council," she said.

The mayor remains open to the multitude of options available, but she confirmed that the plan to expand directly on Lincoln Street should be abandoned.

"As far as I'm concerned, yes, it's dead," Mayor Townsend said.

Councilman David Maradei, who pushes the concept of a small annex on the corner, hopes it will be the compromise accepted by the council, library board and the community.

Asked if he hopes a decision can be reached next Tuesday, Maradei replied: "I can't tell you. If I can get approval from the council for a compromise then it will go to the library board."

One of the continual points in the debate over more space for the library is the question of county library subventions.

The county reimburses the city for services to non-city resident patrons. In 1985-86 that subvention is about $95,000.

The concern is that the county may cut the reimbursements, or build a library at the mouth of the Valley and completely eliminate the payments.

If the annex is constructed and the county subventions cut, the Carmel library may be placed in serious fiscal jeopardy.

Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman does not support the idea of a new county library at the mouth of Carmel Valley.

"As far as I'm concerned there are no specific plans anymore for a library at the mouth of the Valley," she said.

'I JUST don't see duplicating services and buildings to that extent," she said.

As part of its hearing Oct. 22, the council will receive a report from the planning commission that recommends certification of the EIR.

The recommendation in the form of "findings" does not conceal the fact that the commission opposes the plan to expand Harrison Memorial Library directly on Lincoln Street.

One such finding states that the expansion will "result in significant effects on the environment:

"A) Disruption in the grid street pattern, b) diversion of through automobile traffic and change in traffic patterns, c) loss of the most direct route for emergency responses, d) removal of 12 on-street parking spaces, e) disruption of a public open space, mature trees and landscaping and a public visual amenity, f) alteration of a significant structure and its relationship to its site, and g) conflict with adopted environmental policies and goals of the general plan."

The inconsistency of the project with the general plan was further stressed by board member Gene Hammond during the Oct. 2 planning commission review of the EIR.

In his own findings that later were added to the commission's recommendation, Hammond said the general plan states the city should: "require compatible architectural design and low mass intensity scale on Ocean Avenue; discourage inharmonious or out-of-scale new development or remodeling;

"Recognize that the impact of a large number of non-resident vehicles and resulting traffic patterns is not consistent with the residential character of Carmel and control and minimize the situation wherever legally possible;

"Maintain the Harrison Memorial Library's present level of service to the residents of Carmel and surrounding areas. This may entail user fees for non-Carmel residents."

Speaking separately, members of the planning commission also have come out in opposition to the expansion plan.

Carmel River dam tops water panel discussion

By NANCY HILLS

A PANEL discussion on the proposed San Clemente Dam highlighted a Carmel Valley Property Owners Association barbecue Oct. 11 at the recently reopened Robles del Rio Lodge in Carmel Valley.

Panelists Bruce Buel, the general manager of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District; Dick Heuer, a district director not up for election this year; and former Coastal Commissioner and environmentalist Mary Ann Matthews, all said they would reserve final judgment on the dam until the environmental impact report on the dam is finished.

Matthews also said that the alternatives should also be closely looked at.

"I am skeptical of dams because of years of observing Bureau of Reclamation and Corps of Engineers projects, which almost invariably underestimate costs and overestimate benefits," Matthews said.

Buel and Heuer, however, said they expect the environmental impact report being prepared now would indicate that the dam is the best solution to the water problems on the peninsula.

All three of the speakers approved of the approach the water board is taking on the environmental impact report.

"I strongly defend the time it takes to have a report that adequately addresses the problems and alternatives. I am pleased that the board has not picked a project and then an EIR to justify it," Buel said.

Heuer pointed out that the EIR would have to be reviewed by 27 different governmental agencies, nine of which need to give permits for the dam.

"I don't think there has been a single major EIR that has not been taken to court," Heuer said. "We are trying to save time by doing it right the first time."

The draft of the EIR should be finished in March 1986 and completed by August of that year, Buel said.

He added that there had been $300,000 spent on seismic studies that "could have been spent" after the election.

"BUT WE want the voters to understand that the site does not have (earthquake) faults running through it," Buel said.

Heuer said the "one main concern about the dam" is that it would stimulate growth on the peninsula and that "all five of us (on water board) are concerned with the preservation of the peninsula." Heuer suggested an allocation plan to avoid the "growth-inducing impact" that an additional 5,000 acre-ft. per year a 18,000 acre-ft. dam would produce. (An acre-foot equals 325,000 gallons or enough to provide four average households with water for a year.)

"The normal way that the allocation would go would be to divide into equal parts and add to the current yearly allocation. The risk is that with the increase in water, they (cities) can increase their development plans then 'surprise, surprise,' they need more water," he said.

Heuer suggested that the board only add the amount needed for the implementation of the jurisdiction's existing master plans and re-allocate again in the year 2000 and again perhaps in the year 2010.

Heuer said the water hyacinth reclamation project now undergoing experimentation in San Diego looked like the "technology of the future."

None of the other alternatives other than the dam could provide answers to the problems of today, he said.

"It is the only alternative that would help the Carmel River. It would provide water all year long to help control erosion," Heuer said.

IN HIS presentation, Buel said that the "good news is that we live in an area with abundant natural resources" for water, but the problem is we cannot meet existing demands.

Buel said that the Carmel River has an average flow of 64,000 acre-ft. and the current water usage on the peninsula is 17,500 acre-ft. The total water allotment for the year is 20,000 acre-ft.

"The problem is when there is two years of extremely dry weather and we have to depend on ground water (wells) for our supply," he said.

The pumping of the water results in a "pulling down" of the underground water. That "pulling down" results in a "loss of the riparian vegetation" (streamside plant life including cottonwoods and willows).

"When we divided the (water) resource between each city in the district there was an understanding that each jurisdiction would track their water allocation, so as they approved projects or authorized construction they would know how much water they had left (in their allocation)."

Only the County of Monterey, City of Carmel and the Sand City area had kept track of their water, Buel said, and the cities and county have allotted a total of 1,000 acre-ft. of water to new projects.

As an example, Buel said, Monterey found that they had less water than they had thought after allocating 500 acre-ft. to new developments, Buel said.

Matthews was the only panelists that expressed any deep concerns about the dam.

She began her discussion by saying she was skeptical, referring to the Arroyo Seco dam as an example of a project in which alternatives to a dam were not completely investigated.

"The county was moving full speed ahead when those who would have to pay for it balked and insisted on a study of the alternatives. A recommendation for a much different project is now under consideration," Matthews said.

She said the state League of Women Voters conducted a two-year statewide water study that included recommending coordination of water resource and land use planning, encouragement of all forms of water conservation and reclamation, protection of the natural environment and encouragement of a variety of water supply sources with an emphasis on non-structural alternatives.

MATTHEWS WENT on to describe some of the "basic concerns" she felt the public should bring to the debate about the dam.

Matthews said that because the peninsula is a semi-arid area, reoccurrent droughts can be expected.

"If all our effort is concentrated in one big project, we may end up with a big, dry hole," she said.

Water geologists, she added, have said that "high flows" in the river are needed at least part of the year to carry sediment out to the ocean.

"No more than 20 to 25 percent of the average flow of a river should be impounded behind dams. With the average annual flow of the Carmel River between 60,000 acre-ft. to 70,000 acre-ft., an 18,000 acre-ft. dam at San Clemente plus the 1,800 or so left in the Los Padres is at or above the upper limit," Matthews said.

Matthews added that there is "considerable local sentiment that the best long-term solution to the water problem is through conservation and reclamation."

"Financing for the dam is a major concern," Matthews continued. "Originally, the formula proposed was 80 percent, and 20 percent by current residents. Since then it has changed to 60 percent and 40 percent."

"Obviously, if we are dependent on future growth to pay for the dam, we are locked into development impacts that may be intolerable."

Matthews concluded that the EIR on the dam must be "a thorough, objective and fair analysis of the real costs of the dam and alternatives."

City paints itself in corner on art galleries

By MICHAEL GARDNER

THE CITY of Carmel, perhaps through overzealous restrictions, may be defeating its own purpose in attempts to make art galleries "conforming."

A case in point will come before the planning commission when it meets at 4 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 23 in city hall.

Commissioners are to review an application for a use permit for the Loren Adams Gallery, which will replace the Connoisseur Gallery on the west side of San Carlos Street between Sixth and Fifth avenues.

The city actually has the right idea — to require non-conforming businesses with a major change of operations, new ownership, or relocation to apply for a use permit. Conditions can be attached to that use permit to give the city more control over the business.

However, sometimes the conditions may be more than what the applicant wishes to comply with. The applicant can choose simply not to accept the conditions, be denied his use permit and carry on as a non-conforming use.

The lure the city uses to get an applicant to accept the use permit with conditions is not very big.

There are two advantages to obtaining a use permit. One is that the gallery can then extensively remodel. Secondly, the gallery with a use permit can set aside fears of amortization.

But if no remodeling is planned, out the window goes advantage number one. And the implied threat of amortization is not much of a Damocles' sword since the city never has condemned or phased-out a business.

Those two advantages are not much when weighed against the disadvantages of conditions the city imposes on a business applying for a use permit.

In the Loren Adams Gallery case, the land use committee of the board of adjustments emphatically states it does not like the generic art sales operations of Connoisseur Gallery.

"Connoisseur Gallery operated as an art dealer, the least preferred form of art management as viewed by the city," states the committee report.

The committee during its review of the application did not know whether owner Loren Adams planned to continue the art dealership form of ownership.

"If the proposed use is to be operated in a similar way as Connoisseur Gallery, the former use, that the use be denied," the committee recommends.

IF ADAMS accepted the conditions of the use permit he more than likely would have been required to be the "featured" artist.

That would mean that most of the art gallery would have to contain his paintings.

In addition, he would be required to paint on-site.

Adams and building owner Craig McFarland found those conditions unacceptable and have indicated that they probably will reject the requirements and remain non-conforming.

One of the problems faced by the city is that the use permit "runs with the land." Even if Adams agreed to the conditions, McFarland probably would not.

If the conditions were accepted and Adams would leave the gallery it would be difficult for McFarland to find a new occupant who could meet the city's demands.

Thus, because of the very restrictive conditions, it is highly unlikely that art gallery operators and their landlords would want to obtain a conforming use permit when there is a change of ownership.

The framework for the city's attempts to control the art galleries through the use permit process was laid by the general plan, which includes numerous policies to discourage tourist-oriented businesses. The most-often mentioned of these businesses are: art galleries, jewelry stores and t-shirt shops.

A precedent was established in June 1984 when the council authorized a use permit for the Bennett Gallery on Cottage Row.

The council reasoned that since sculpture galleries have not proliferated in the town, a use permit could be approved. In effect, the council said more unique art styles would not be detrimental to the village character.

But approval of that application also sent a message to the planning commission: that the council would like more unique kinds of art or working studios.

The more traditional seascape oil paintings are frowned upon. That is why the committee is trying to alter the operations of the generic Connoisseur Gallery when Loren Adams takes over the location.

For his part, Adams promises that his art will be for the "serious collector" and not "souvenirs."

He said he will maintain the quality of art found in the Connoisseur Gallery.

Other matters before the board of adjustments Oct. 23 include:

- An application for two benches for outdoor patio seating at the Picnic Box, west side of Mission Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues.

- An application from I. Magnin in Carmel Plaza to expand.

- An application from Richard Pepe for a use permit to operate a bakery on the north side of Ocean Avenue between San Carlos and Mission streets. Pepe has bought Wishart's bakery.

- An application for a working studio and art gallery on the south side of Sixth Avenue between Dolores and Lincoln streets. Lillian Braico-Lewis wishes to take over the sites previously occupied by the St. Galy Studio and Gallery, and the DeGroot Gallery.

Del Monte Center On The Mall

BUSINESS BEAT BY NANCY HILLS

Some weeks better than others

WRITING WHEN one is ill is no easy task so I must ask readers to bear with the ups and downs of the column this week.

MARKET GOES TO MARKET

The Village Market on the corner of Dolores Street and Eighth Avenue — one of those resident-oriented businesses — is currently in escrow. Gloria and James Groves have owned the market for the past three years and are now ready to retire. The delicatessen in the same building is not owned by the market and is not a part of the sale.

Gloria Groves said she did not yet know when the sale would be final.

"It's (the market) been here a long, long time," Groves said. "It used to be the drive-in market."

Now, can you imagine trying to get a permit for a drive-in market passed now days? My word, it boggles the mind.

GOODBYE ELLIE'S HAYLOFT

People are piling in to Ellie's Hayloft on Dolores Street to say goodbye and pick up on her going-out-of-business sale.

Owner/Ellie Lester has sold the shop she's owned for 11 years to John and Peggy Coonley, owners of Handworks, also on Dolores Street.

The word so far is that Lester plans to close Ellie's Hayloft by Dec. 1 and a Handworks II will go into the spot about Feb. 1. The first Handworks will remain in business.

All one has to do is stand in the shop for 10 minutes to hear people expressing their sadness about the closing.

"What will I do without you?" is a comment I heard more than once while perusing the sale items myself.

Lester has been the president of the Carmel Business Association for the past two years and, don't worry, I do plan to cover her in-depth a little later. Right now she said she is looking forward to a good, long rest.

KIMONOS, OBIS AND JADE TREES

Kimonos are not a type of clothing you often see people wearing on Ocean Avenue.

But now there is a place to get them if the urge to do so strikes.

Kogetsu is a new shop in The Crossroads that sells Japanese and other Oriental items, including formal Japanese wedding and day-to-day kimonos.

The shop is owned by Jim and June Tajiri, who recently sold their Toro Restaurant and Gift Shop just off Highway 68 near Salinas.

The new shop is really June's, Jim Tajiri said, he's simply been taking care of it while she's in Japan buying special wigs to complete the shop's wedding outfits.

Tajiri said they will sell or rent the kimonos for weddings and ceremonies.

The shop also has obis, the sash that goes around the kimono, Tajiri said. The shop carries both new and old kimonos and obis.

"Some of the embroidery is just beautiful," Tajiri said.

"Some people like to use the obis as runners on their tables and we have them for both wearing and display."

For those who do not want to dress up but still appreciate Japanese craftsmanship, Kogetsu carries cloisonne vases, eggs, lamps and various forms of the enamel-and-metal artform.

The shop also has "jade trees" made in mainland China carved from semi-precious stones such as jade, carnelian and rose quartz.

A colorful Padre homecoming

Pretty girls, fancy floats highlight the annual tradition

JIMMY PANETTA gets his jersey adjusted and readied to go back in on offense. The junior Panetta, son of U.S. Congressman Leon Panetta, carried seven times for 44 yards in the Padres' 14-8 homecoming loss to visiting Gonzales Oct. 12. (Michael Gardner photos.)

THE JUNIOR class captured first place in the float competition.

THE SENIOR float wound up second.

THE SOPHOMORE float took home a third place.

THE FRESHMAN class finished fourth in the float competition.

Halloween safety

THE ARRIVAL of Halloween indicates the start of the holiday season, with an array of festivities that make this a special time of year. Taking certain safety precautions will help make this Halloween a happy one for ghosts, goblins and monsters of all ages.

No Halloween is complete without the traditional jack-o'-lantern. If you choose to light your jack-o'-lantern, use a little common sense in doing so. Don't place the pumpkin near anything flammable, and make sure it is secure in such a way that it will not tip over. If you use a plastic jack-o'-lantern, do not use an open flame to light it (candle, lantern). Light it with a small battery-powered lantern or lamp.

When shopping for costumes for your children, be sure that the material is flame-resistant and that the child can clearly see out of the mask. Also, make sure that the costume reflects light. If you make your child's costume be sure he or she can comfortably and safely move about in it, and can clearly see out of it.

If your children go trick-or-treating without you, make sure they are supervised and that they all carry flashlights. It is best if they stay in familiar surroundings and only go to the houses of people they know well.

Don't allow your children to eat any of their treats until you have had a chance to inspect the food, especially any fruit and home-made items. Check the packaging of commercially made treats for any signs of tampering (loose wrapping, tears, pinholes) then throw out anything that you suspect may have been tampered with.

Young children are not the only ones who celebrate Halloween. Teenagers and adults like to take part also, and have every right to, whether it is by partying, giving away treats or just "messing around with the gang." However, all too often the children are the ones who suffer fear and injuries from the inconsideration of older, more "mature" individuals. All that is really necessary to prevent these injuries is a little courtesy and common sense, which for some is a lot to ask. Be a little more careful when driving on Halloween, and for those of you out "messing around," leave the little ones alone.

Halloween night is a time of celebration for the young and young at heart, and should be enjoyed by all who wish to be involved. However, it is not to be enjoyed by certain people at the expense of others, especially children.

DESIGNER SHOES FROM ITALY TO CARMEL

From Japan to Italy, The Crossroads is getting quite international.

Renato Arena, owner of Raspini Fine Italian Shoes said he did not know exactly when his shop will open but it will be soon, he assured me.

Arena is a partner and designer for Raspini Shoes.

"We manufacture our own shoes in Italy. All are hand-stitched, fine leather and in the classic look," he said.

Arena designs many of the shoes himself, he said, and has been doing so for the past 10 years.

The Carmel Raspini shop is the second store for Arena and his partner, Michael Ferrari. They have another one in New York City.

Arena gave me a rather interesting description of the interior design of the store.

"I took a picture in Rome at Vatican City, where the columns disappeared like the old columns, they get smaller and smaller as in the Roman architecture. We have taken the interior design from that picture. It is all done in white Italian marble," Arena said. "It is very cozy inside."

Somewhat, I'm having a hard time picturing it. Sounds like something I'll have to see for myself.

LATITUDE 36 CHANGES

I have been calling Peter Stuber, owner of Latitude 36, for weeks now trying to find out what's happening in the restaurant/bar located at Carmel Rancho Center.

The liquor license has been sold to Consuelo's Mexican restaurant in Monterey, so Latitude 36 will no longer be selling mixed drinks. It will continue to sell beer and wine, however.

Stuber said there are more changes in the future.

"I'm going to change the image of the place," Stuber said. What exactly that entails remains to be seen.

WHERE IS LUCIE E.?

Why is it nobody seems to notice when you do put something in the newspaper, but always seem to notice when something is left out?

I neglected to put in the location for Lucie E. Alan, Fun-Ware, a new clothing store in Carmel. Take note now. It will be located on the west side of Dolores Street between Seventh and Eighth avenues right next to the Carmel Village Theater.

Uniquely Carmel

NIELSEN BROS. super non-super market opened more than 50 years ago. Brothers Walter and Harold Nielsen came to Carmel during the worst of the depression and they took whatever jobs were available, including work at the Carmel Butcher Shop (a restaurant now — a real old fashioned butcher shop then).

With a little money in savings and lots of enthusiasm the two young men opened their market. There were already 13 competing markets struggling to exist in a village of only 1,000 residents. The brothers decided to make their market the friendliest and best stocked market in town. Charge accounts were started (some may still be on the books), home delivery every day and a top quality produce department and butcher shop.

The business thrived as the two brothers raised families and invested more and more in the community and its future. It was 25 years before Merv Sutton bought Walter's half interest and started the second generation of the family-owned super non-super market.

Merv Sutton and Nancie Nielsen (daughter of Walter Nielsen) were both born in Carmel, both attended Sunset School and Carmel High. They fell in love in high school and were married in 1959. Now the parents of three children: Jeffrey, age 22; Daphne, age 17; and Christian, age 14. Daphne is a senior at Carmel High and Christian a freshman.

Merv worked for his father in the construction business during his summer high school vacations, and also delivered groceries — for Nielsen Bros. This first connection with the Niensens led to that purchase by Merv of Walter's half interest in the business in 1962. Four years later he bought the remaining half interest from Harold Nielsen.

Merv and Nancie put youth, energy and imagination into building an increasingly successful business. The concept of listening to customers' requests, and then acting on those requests, made Nielsen Bros. unique. The dictum of shelf-space turnover simply doesn't rule Merv and Nancie's merchandising.

Thirteen years after Merv and Nancie bought the market a most important event took place. Dale Leidig, property owner and close friend, asked Merv and Nancy if they would consider moving the market, then at Dolores and Seventh, to the corner of San Carlos and Seventh. He promised Merv he could have total control over design. The building would be constructed to meet the special needs of a unique market.

In 1979 the plans were approved and construction began. The following year the new market opened and a unique part of Carmel was assured.

The display of fresh produce, and yes, raspberries year-round, surprises visitors. Such treasures as fresh white corn from Carmel Valley, tomatoes fresh off the vine, grapes, peaches and pears of the rarest variety make this business more than just a place to buy food. The wine shop is truly a collector's gold mine. More than 162 wineries are represented.

The butcher shop has aged meat, fresh fish, barbecued chicken and ribs, and above all else, Mel the Butcher. He and the other butchers prepare your orders exactly the way you want them prepared — and will help with cooking tips. Then there are exotic pates, fresh pasta, beluga caviar, truffles, smoked pheasant, imported cheese, roasted coffees, virgin olive oil, fresh herbs and, of course, home delivery and catering.

Thanks to Merv and Nancie for staying uniquely Carmel.

PINE WHISPERS

Ahh, to be a child again

IT WAS theater of the absurd at its best and we're not just talking about the Bag Ladies' performance either.

BAG LADIES Barbara Weingarten, a River School teacher; and Marvin Biasotti, district psychologist, carted their belongings on stage in a choreographed number that brought the house down. (Michael Gardner photo.)

Under a beautiful star-lit Indian Summer sky at the Forest Theater Saturday, Oct. 12, the Friends of the Carmel Unified Schools (FOCUS), ate, drank and danced the night away all for a good cause — to raise funds for local public schools. (The event netted about $5,000.)

But this fund raiser was not your typical stuffed-shirt, tuxedo-and-dance-gown affair. Instead, most of Carmel's educators and supporters tossed caution to the wind, braved Monday morning ridicule and became children again, at least for the night in keeping with the theme "As We Were."

The top act of the night was the Bag Ladies, an ensemble of teachers and principals with worn-out Michael Jackson gloves (River School Principal Rosemary Montgomery's was the best), bonnets more apt to be found on a horse pulling a tourist carriage in New York's Central Park (that's you teacher Patrick Allan), and socks you wouldn't even catch Cyndi Lauper wearing (teacher Barbara Weingarten was the main culprit.)

But the best outfit had to go to district psychologist Marvin Biasotti, whose combat boots with taps would even throw Freud for a loop. Other members of the entourage included Marsha Kading Kelly, Donna Robinson and Alys Bliesner.

The tap dance number by the Bag Ladies brought the house down with the assistance of the musical trio of school board trustee Hilton Bialek, vocals, Ken Weingarten on drums and Roberta Bialek playing the piano. Later, Hilton Bialek was overheard talking about teaming with Sinatra for a Johnny Carson Show appearance.

Other fine shows were given by the Dance and Twirl Club choreographed by Jennie England. The audience marveled at their twirling and dancing skills performed in a variety of colorful costumes.

Most of the audience was more in tune with the foxtrot, two step and polka, but Chris Whipple and Barbara Allan gave an enjoyable lesson in break dancing.

On a slower pace were Rene and Theresa deBarros, a musical duo; guitarist Tom Faia; and Weis Norberg, who soloed. Harold Santee, despite missing his glasses and having a slow go of it reading the entertainment lineup, did a fine job as master of ceremonies.

IN THE audience, there were plenty of great costumes.

Jean White and Wendy Banks hammed it up with their freckle-faces and licorice; Zane Speiser's outrageous tie was one of the best accessories; Pat Cunningham came as a nun because it was a handy leftover from last year's Halloween theme; and lettermen sweaters worn by young athletes long ago dominated the men's selections.

Of course, the question on everybody's mind was why City Administrator Doug Schmitz and his wife, Carmela Bowns, came as "He and She — Yuppies at Large."

However, the question couldn't be posed because the couple drove off in their Volvo before anyone thought to ask.

Carmel High School Principal Joe Feldeisen came as a homecoming queen escort, complete with corsage and a suit that vaguely resembled a tux. Joe said he was dressed like that because of his chaperoning duties for the Homecoming dance, and not because it was always his secret fantasy as a high school student to date a homecoming queen.

The hors d'oeuvres were delightful and in keeping with the theme. Bubblegum, popcorn, marshmallows and finger sandwiches of peanut butter and jelly helped whet the appetite of the crowd.

In the barbeque pit, the men took over the spatulas. They were Supt. Robert Infelise, Dan Yurkovich, Jim Heisinger Sr.

FORMER SUPT. William Rand shared a laugh with Pat Cunningham, district payroll clerk, who dressed as a nun, which didn't really have anything to do with the FOCUS theme "The Way We Were" because she didn't attend Catholic school. She claims that she wore the costume during the party last year with its Halloween theme and it went over so well that she wore it again by popular demand. (Michael Gardner photo.)

and Chris Spaulding. This gallant display of culinary skills no doubt will bring additional KP to the fearsome foursome at home now that their better halves know of their cooking talents.

Celebrants were able to dance off the extra pounds put on by the barbecued chicken and hamburgers later on in the evening, thanks to the sounds of Music Unlimited.

the Keck Auditorium on the campus of Robert Louis Stevenson School. The so-called Grace Commission is responsible for uncovering widely-known governmental abuses as the $436 hammer and various pork-barreling and boondoggling by the nation's lawmakers. Grace's lecture is entitled "The Problem with Big Government." Cost is $10 for the lecture. There will also be a pre-speech buffet-reception at 5:30 p.m. in which Grace will autograph complimentary copies of his book, "Burning Money." A donation of $100 is asked for this portion of the event. Proceeds from the event go to fund the lecture series. For more information call RLS at 624-1257.

BIRTHS AROUND TOWN

Shane Vincent Fancier, a boy, was welcomed to the world by his parents, Paul and Peggy Fancier of Carmel. Shane was born Sept. 25 at Community Hospital. Even though this is out of the area, we thought we'd throw in Casey Jack O'Neal, a bouncing baby boy born to Monterey photographer Tom O'Neal and his wife Mollie, Sept. 21, also at Community Hospital. Bet there were a lot of photographs of that event.

COMMENDABLE STUDENTS COMMENDED

Joe Feldeisen, principal of Carmel High School, reports that Eileen Chow (she's been in these pages before), Charis McGaughey, Aaron Ross and Judy Yu, have been designated Commended Students in the 1986 National Merit Scholarship Program. Feldeisen said these seniors will receive a letter of commendation in honor of their outstanding academic promise, demonstrated by placing in the top 5 percent of more than one million participants in the 31st annual scholarship program. Although their qualifying test scores in the PSAT-NMSQT were high, the 35,000 commended students scored only slightly below the level required to be a semifinalist. More than 5,800 merit scholarships will be awarded in 1986. Congratulations to these fine Carmel High School students.

VETS HELPING VETS ON THE LINKS

Plans are underway for the third annual Veterans Helping Veterans Gold Tournament, to be held Saturday, Nov. 2 at the Bayonet Golf Course at Fort Ord. Fee is $25 per player and includes steak dinner and prizes. Green fees and carts are not included. Dinner will be held at the American Legion Post 694 in Marina. The tourney begins at 12 noon with a shotgun start. For info contact either Bob Morton at 443-6645 or Les Masatani at 899-2571, ext. 323.

BUILDING BRIDGES OF HARMONY

An enthusiastic and adoring audience greeted Monterey Bay

Symphony maestro Oleg Kovalenko and special guests Lloyd Bridges and his wife — who just happened to be celebrating a wedding anniversary that day — at a champagne reception at the Beach and Tennis Club at Pebble Beach, Oct. 14, following the symphony's well-received debut Sunday evening, Oct. 13. Guests mingled with Bridges and Kovalenko at the reception hosted by the Colleagues of the Monterey Bay Symphony. Bridges, who narrated Copland's Lincoln Portrait at the debut concert, and cellist Carmen Martin, featured soloist, were guest artists at the reception. Bridges and his wife were also presented with an anniversary gift by the organization.

LOOKING FOR A CHRISTMAS PARTY

Administrators at the New West Dialysis Clinic, which treats patients with kidney and other related diseases, want to put on a Christmas party for their patients come Dec. 5 at the First Presbyterian Church in Monterey. They have a time and place now, but are in dire need of donations of time, food, decorations, gifts and even a little elbow grease to help with the preparations. This will be the last Christmas for several of the clinic's patients, says Marjorie Atkinson, clinic social worker, so she wants it to be a "lovely occasion" for them. Any help you can offer the clinic will be greatly appreciated, she adds. The clinic is located at 3785 Via Nona Marie at the mouth of the Valley. Call her at 624-1204 to get more information or to offer your help.

Pin contest still open

THE CARMEL-by-the-Sea chapter of the American Red Cross is sponsoring a contest that should keep entrants on pins and needles.

The chapter is looking for a design for its chapter pin and thought a contest would be the ideal thing to get the community involved, said John Jacoby, chapter member and volunteer firefighter.

To that end Jacoby said the chapter will award $50 to the winning entry, and if a student is not the winner, dinner for two for the best student design. Deadline for entries is Friday, Oct. 18.

The contest is open to residents of the area the chapter covers, which includes the entire area covered by the Carmel Unified School District, and south of the district to the county line. Judging will be held at the chapter's Oct. 24 board meeting.

Entries will be displayed at the chapter house as they are received, said Jacoby.

Send entries to: Chapter Pin Design Contest, PO Box AR, Carmel 93921, or drop entry by the chapter house, Eighth Street and Dolores Avenue. For more information call 624-6921.

The hare-y tail of Tularcitos

A NEW creation has entered academia in Carmel Valley. Were it cloneable, it would be the biggest hit since Schultz invented Snoopy. In its singular state, it has riveted the attention of all the kids at Tularcitos School.

The object of all the adulation is a six-month-old Angora rabbit named Pierre Cottontail. If I hadn't been told about him before I met him, I would have thought Pierre to be a genetic hybrid with a liberal dollop of guinea-pig corpuscles. Even to this devout rabbit lover, Pierre's appearance is deceptively — well — creative.

His charming helter-skelter looks have fired the artistic genius of the third grade classes in particular. They have written poems and stories about Pierre and have immortalized him in paintings and drawings as well.

Both Shirley Graham's and Imogene Speiser's students were the first to catch the Pierre craze, for their teachers signed up early to incorporate the bunny into their curriculum.

Judi Leavelle's kindergarten classroom was Pierre's first home, as Judi is the rightful owner of the little fellow. Most days after school he accompanies her home to — where else? — Animal Farm where he plays happily with the menagerie, including several very large peacocks.

But back to his life at Tularcitos. He travels around freely, entering various classrooms at will and frequently amazing visitors such as the firemen who brought their firetruck to school the same day I visited.

Whether in one of the classrooms or out in the garden behind them, Pierre shows what I can only call a remarkable aura of self-assurance. The little hare is not yet exactly macho, but he shows a total lack of concern for the usual spooks of the rabbit kingdom.

The children put him in a pram, or a wheelbarrow or a wagon, and Pierre is quite nonchalant regardless. Actually, nonchalant may not describe his expression as seen in the accompanying photos, but he is at least quite relaxed and happy.

The new librarian Laney Humphrey plans to bring her spinning wheel to school to make Angora yarn straight from the source. And in Ms. Leavelle's kindergarten, where the kids study words beginning with a particular letter for a week, Angora was high on the 'A' list...and bunny is bound to be in the 'B' batch.

I plan to make a return visit to school to check on developments around the cowlicked quadruped, and you may be sure that another tale of this fine French fellow is in the offing...but not for another few months.

FRIVOLOUS AND unnecessary was the description several south county ranchers applied to Supervisor Sam Karas' proposed ordinance banning dogs from riding loose in the back of pickups.

Speaking at a public hearing in the supervisors' chambers Tuesday, the ranchers present said repeatedly that their dogs never fell out of their trucks and added that what they did with their dogs was their own business.

Karas tried patiently to point out the obvious parallel between the safety of pets and the safety of children, but his words fell on deaf ears in the crowd that scoffed that "dogs aren't people."

Even the gruesome statistic that more than 100,000 canine deaths per year are attributed to dogs falling out of trucks failed to move the group. But fortunately present also was a sizeable number of advocates of the ordinance, including at least three intrepid Valley folk.

John Tiernan, who spoke as a private citizen rather than as the former director of the Monterey County SPCA, endorsed the measure strongly, as did Julie Harvey who noted that she was shocked when she moved to the Valley to observe the practice she said she had never seen in other parts of this country or in Canada. And the Sage read aloud a letter from Laura Sinks and Peter Shaw of Jamesburg who wrote that "the issue of dogs being dragged and thrown from the backs of pickup trucks requires a law sufficient to change a long-standing and abusive practice...The backs of pickups are designed for cargo, and live dogs are not cargo."

Perhaps the most eloquent statement was made by Jo Stallard of Pacific Grove, who addressed the ethical aspects of the problem. Most cruelty, she noted, is inherited habit. Thus, without actually attacking those who play Russian roulette with their canines' fate, she pointed out that it is a tradition whose time has long been up.

The supervisors' decision on the matter has been postponed until after another public hearing Oct. 22. Thus you have another week to drum up support for this very important measure. And if you do your part well enough, two things will happen. Dogs will be safer, and the Valley Sage can finally go on to other matters. Ciao.

Visitors get first-hand look inside fire house

"FIRO" — the walking, talking fire hydrant on loan from the Pacific Grove Fire Department — was the hit of the open house at the Carmel Fire Department Sunday, Oct. 13. FIRO even went on a few walks down Ocean Avenue talking to the tourists and delighting youngsters. The fire department open house featured demonstrations of equipment and tours of the station topped off with cookies and punch. Departments that also attended were: Salinas, Carmel Highlands, Pacific Grove, Rio Road CSA 43, Mid-Carmel Valley and the Naval Postgraduate School. Two commercial services — All American Fire Systems and A.L. Lease Co. — demonstrated smoke detectors and residential sprinkler systems. (Michael Gardner photos.)

WHAT FIRE department open house would be complete without a Dalmatian, symbol of firefighters everywhere? Above, the Carmel Highlands mascot, appropriately named Cinder, was surrounded by youngsters during the city of Carmel Fire Department open house Sunday.

City responds to Eastwood

story to eliminate the two-story wall effect.

"3. Utilization of a wood exterior.

"4. Reduction in the amount of glass.

"In that letter, the City offered to 'fast track' the project back to the Planning Commission within three weeks for reconsideration. Mr. Eastwood's response was to go forward with the appeal of the design that had been rejected by the Planning Commission.

"At the City Council meeting of April 2, at the time of the appeal hearing, on the resubmittal, members of the Council again commented that the design did not meet the General Plan criteria; that the two-story wall effect on San Carlos Street was still of concern and that the structure did not fit in with the village character. In addition, the Council expressed concerns about the amount of water a new two-story, multiple lot building would consume.

"After all of these efforts to provide Mr. Eastwood guidance, he filed a lawsuit. The City made another attempt to meet with Mr. Eastwood and this session was held on July 1. At that time, four alternatives were discussed for the resolution of the lawsuit. One included the City paying for the drawing of concept plans as a resolution of the lawsuit.

This alternative was an extraordinary measure, a last effort to constructively resolve the matter in the planning arena rather than in the court and would assist Mr. Eastwood in getting a project approved.

"It was an approach to put our efforts into a constructive solution rather than into attorney's fees. This alternative to the litigation, as well as three other alternatives, was rejected. At this point, the City Council decided not to initiate any other approaches to Mr. Eastwood and to respond to his lawsuit.

"Members of the City Council have great empathy for Mr. Eastwood in regard to his development. However, as Council Members we have a responsibility to Carmel-by-the-Sea's General Plan.

"Adopted in 1982, all citizens participated in the development of this document through the General Plan Questionnaire. As a planning tool, the General Plan enunciates what type of community we want. Los Angeles-style buildings are not wanted.

"Mr. Eastwood, the Council again offers to meet with you, as it tried in the past, to resolve this matter so that you can develop your property and the Council can uphold the City's General Plan. We believe, as we always have, that this matter can and should be resolved outside of litigation.

Mahroom condos jump hurdle

THE MONTEREY County minor subdivision committee has recommended approval of the proposed combined development permit for the Mahroom subdivision.

The proposed project off Outlook and High Meadow drives now will be presented to the county planning commission in November.

The tentative subdivision map indicates a 36-condominium project on 2.07 acres of property in the area known as High Meadows, southeast of Highway 1 and Carpenter Road.

Neighborhood groups have opposed the project because of the density of about 18 units per acre. Opponents have lobbied the county to decrease the density by about half.

If the combined development permit, which includes the environmental impact report and tract map, is supported by the planning commission it then would be presented to the board of supervisors for final approval.

Carmel Youth Center hosts goulsh Halloween festival

By SUSAN BOCK

A STEALTHY dark-hooded figure cast luminous shadows on the Carmel streets as he stalked silently from corner to corner, suspiciously glancing from side to side as if to be sure no one was following. Anxiously he darted across Junipero at Fifth Street and headed in the direction of Torres.

Stopping in front of the Carmel Youth Center, he looked uneasily over his shoulder. Waving his arm in the cold night air he flung his black cape around his neck. A sinister

"This extraordinary event will give everyone a chance to don his most creative cap so that he can parade his most colorful and ingenious costumes before some of the most elite of Carmel."

gloved hand reached out and yanked open the front door of the center.

Suddenly a burst of light hit the gloomy streets and the still and quiet air overflowed with the sounds of Elvis crooning a favorite tune and the laughter and bubbling voices of ghosts and goblins and gorillas and multimasted figures dancing to the music of Blue Suede Shoes.

The event was the Halloween Fund-raiser — but wait, this is only a prediction of the future! Merlin the Magician just glanced into his crystal ball to predict the enormous success of Halloween night at the Carmel Youth Center!

No one in Carmel will want to miss this exclusive fund-raiser, a Halloween delight, to take place from 7 to 11 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 26 at the Center. This extraordinary event will give everyone a chance to don his most creative cap so that he can parade his most colorful and ingenious costume before some of the most elite of Carmel, namely, Mikel Pippi, director of the Frohman Foundation, and Robert Infelise, superintendent of the Carmel Unified School District.

Costumes will be judged the most original, the funniest, the scariest and the best couple. You can win — if you dare — one of the prizes generously donated by some of the finest merchants in Carmel, a 14-carat gold charm from Studio Jewelers, two $15 bar credits from Maxwell McFly's, a brass vase from Variations, two bottles of champagne from Nielsen Brothers Market or lunch for two at Highlands Inn in the California Market Place.

If you don't win for your wonderful costume you could still succeed in the raffle and walk away with a case of wine from Surf N' Sand, a silk blouse from Indonesian Imports, $20 worth of gas or service at Carmel Mobil, or tickets for a six-hour ride in a limousine donated by Carmel Limo, Inc.

But everyone will be a winner at this lively affair as they rock the night away to the tunes of Johnny Baron and the Bel-Airs and share the added treat of Johnny's Elvis Revue which takes you through the early Elvis years with numbers such as "That's Alright Mama," "Heartbreak Hotel," "Blue Suede Shoes," and countless segues of the King's best.

The night of the Halloween Festival will be hosted by Carole Colter, director of the youth center, as the doors open at 7 p.m. to a no-host bar with the excitement and dancing getting underway at 8:30. Tickets for this wonderful party are available for your tax-deductible donation of only $10. Just call the youth center at 624-3285 or mail your request to P.O. Box 2399, Carmel, Calif. 93921, or purchase your tickets at the door on the night of the party, but don't delay — Merlin predicts a night to remember for everyone!

Thanks to your endless support at these fund-raisers the young people of our community have the benefit of this wonderful center at their disposal chockfull of daily activities for their enjoyment.

Fair Ladies of Carmel hang up their stockings

By MAC McDONALD

IT MAY still be a little early to be thinking about Christmas, but not for the Fair Ladies of Carmel. Christmas is a year-round project for them.

The dozen or so members of the Fair Ladies work year-round on little Santas, teddy bears, angels, snowmen, pine trees and little drummer boys, all for the club's immensely popular once-a-year Christmas sale held in November. This year will mark the 21st — and to the chagrin of the members, last — Christmas Sale and Tea, held from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Friday, Nov. 8 at the Carmel Women's Club, San Carlos and Ninth.

The sale will be the last for the group because after 10 years of hosting the group every week, Helen Spencer and her husband will be moving, so the group will no longer be able to use the Spencer's basement as a workshop and storage room for all their Christmas goodies.

"We don't have a place to put our things," explained Leonie Hudson at one of the group's regular Wednesday gatherings in the Spencer "workshop." It takes a big workshop and storage area."

"Yes, it would be great if we could get a space," added Vaughn Hague, who was working at a table covered with colorful beads, ribbons and yarn.

The group's sale every year is so popular people are lined up outside the doors an hour before the sale starts at 10 a.m.; by noon virtually every item has been sold. But only weeks after the sale group members gather again to start on the little ornaments and trinkets for the next year.

"We're the elves," laughed Hudson. "We work towards this all year long. We all enjoy being creative and giving our time. And all proceeds go to local charities."

The basement of the Spencer home indeed looks like Santa's workshop in which the elves have been doing overtime. Boxes and boxes of already completed holiday trinkets are stacked in the back room, while the ladies busily put the finishing touches to even more colorful figurines in.

FOR 21 years the Fair Ladies have been hosting the sale, which also includes tea, a table of refreshments, and musical entertainment, making it somewhat of an institution in Carmel. That will come to end this year — unless they can come up with another place for a workshop and storage area, something club members don't appear to be too optimistic about.

Members of the Fair Ladies of Carmel for this year's sale in addition to Hudson, Hague and Spencer are: Genevieve Cowan, Beverly Morford, Gladys McCloud, Esther Spindler, Marjorie Evers, Margaret Snead, Kay Vaughn, Eileen Davey, and Ida Hanel.

A STRING of teddy bears for Christmas perhaps? Gladys McCloud displays one of the Fair Ladies' handiwork in the basement workshop-storage area the group will soon have to leave behind because the owner is moving. (Mac McDonald photo.)

The Monterey Peninsula's economy and our jobs depend upon the very thing that brought us here to live and work — the scenic beauty of the area and our exceptional quality of life.

Yet that quality of life is threatened by a shortage of water. Several of our cities are close to the limit of their allocation of water. The only cost-effective solution is to build a new small dam on the Carmel River.

A vote for NICK LOMBARDO for Monterey Peninsula Water Management Director Nov. 5 will keep us moving toward the solution to our need for more water.

Supervisors may consider construction on floodways

THE MONTEREY County Board of Supervisors Tuesday afternoon said it may later consider applications for construction of new residences in the floodway area along the Carmel River.

The board has asked the county planning commission to review possible amendments to the floodway ordinance to allow some development with stringent conditions.

Supervisors were responding to complaints that owners of lots of record have been unable to build because of a moratorium on construction in the floodway.

The concern is that new construction could alter the river patterns and pose a danger to existing homes in the floodway, explained Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman, who represents most of Carmel Valley.

Strasser Kauffman said there are 35 vacant lots of record and 476 existing dwellings in the floodway.

The supervisor believes that past county approval of those dwellings in the floodway was a mistake and she does not want to add to any possible problems in the event of a flood.

"Let's not add to past mistakes. Frankly, most of those houses in the floodway are past mistakes. To add to them now will be compounding problems."

Strasser Kauffman wants to allow construction on new lots of record if the property owner can prove the development will not cause alterations to the floodway that could endanger other residences.

However, she opposes any plan to permit additions to existing dwellings in the floodway — at least until the county can see how any new residences affect the area.

Strasser Kauffman also wants to ensure that no new development be allowed within 200 feet of the riparian habitat.

"Obviously if we were not concerned we would stick with the existing ordinance."

Strasser Kauffman added that there will be opportunity for public comment on any changes during public hearings before the planning commission and supervisors.

Big Sur LUP adoption Oct. 22

THE MONTEREY County Board of Supervisors is expected to formally adopt the Big Sur Land Use Plan Oct. 22.

The land use plan (LUP) hearing is scheduled for 11:45 a.m. in the county courthouse in Salinas.

Supervisors in a working session Oct. 8 gave tentative approval following numerous changes in the plan to strengthen its controlled-growth focus.

In other action Oct. 22, supervisors at 1:30 p.m. are to discuss a possible "density bonus" amendment to the inclusionary housing ordinance.

The ordinance requires developers to set aside 15 percent of their property for low-and moderate-cost housing units.

Developers have asked for a "density bonus" to be considered.

For example, under the current ordinance developers of a site zoned for a maximum of 100 homes could sell just 85 of the homes at market value. The other 15 units would have to be set aside as low- and moderate-cost housing.

Developers would rather be allowed the maximum number of units, in this example 100, to be built and sold at market value. Then the county would provide a density bonus of 15 units on the same property to be set aside for low- and moderate-cost housing.

Thus, the total number of units would be 115, or a bonus of 15 more than the density zoning allows.

CHURCHES

Joseph Chilton Pearce lecture

Joseph Chilton Pearce, bestselling author and world-wide lecturer and teacher, will speak on human development and the awesome, creative potential we have to repair and heal the damage that has been done by our technological society.

The provocative, innovative ideas are found in his new book, The Magical Child Matures. The lecture will be at the Monterey Conference Center from 7 to 10 p.m. Monday, Oct. 21.

Pearce believes that the current epidemic increase in childhood suicides, schizophrenia, premature sexuality and the disappearance of childhood is caused by a breakdown in social and intellectual development. He explores the astonishing capacity we have to repair this damage.

A former teacher, Pearce now lectures internationally. Earlier books are Crack in the Cosmic Egg, Bond of Power, and Magical Child, a study of human development. The lecture is sponsored by the Science of Mind Seminars, Monterey.

Tickets and more information may be obtained at the Science of Mind Center, 400 W. Franklin St., Monterey, or by calling 372-7200.

AIDS update

New developments in medical treatment of AIDS, cancer and pain, together with advice for travelers, will be discussed at a workshop for advanced medical training, Oct. 24-26 in Monterey.

More than 150 physicians are expected to attend California Medical Association's 35th annual post-graduate institute for West Coast counties.

A session on cancer quackery will be included in the Thursday-through-Saturday program.

The institute, to be held at the Monterey Sheraton Hotel, is a cooperative effort of CMA, Monterey County Medical Society, and physician experts. Dr. Donald Scanlon, a Carmel internist, is seminar chairman.

CMA presents several post-graduate institutes each year in various California locations to bring information on medical advances to practicing physicians.

Scripture class

SEEK-A Scripture Class will conduct a live auction 10 a.m. Sat. Oct. 26 at the Old Parish Hall, San Carlos Cathedral, Monterey. A preview will be available from 8:30 to 10 a.m. Many items will be offered for sale by Rod Fandel, auctioneer. Donations for the auction are being accepted. For information and arrangements for pick-up call Jack Branson at 375-8603, or Rod Fandel at 394-0539.

Book fair

Prints and original paintings, as well as sheet music and records, have been added to the 2,000 or more books for sale at All Saints' Church Book Fair which will be held at 10 a.m., Saturday, Oct. 19 in the Parish Hall, Lincoln and Ninth, Carmel.

The fair opens at 10 a.m. and continues until 3 p.m. That day only, lunch, snacks and babysitting will be available. Sunday, the hours of the bargain book fair are from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Experienced volunteers will be on hand to help the buyer make a selection from the many histories, biographies, autobiographies, religious and philosophical texts as well as reference books and "how-to-do-it's." Mysteries, romances, historical novels and westerns are all included at bargain prices.

"Children's books are a specialty of the fair," said Jeannine Dyer, co-chairman of the event.

Proceeds are used for scholarships, books for school and church libraries and for special needs of the parish.

The Golden Years
By Miles Williams

Osteoporosis, the gradual loss of bone tissue, is particularly prevalent among women after menopause. One woman in 4 over the age of 45 will be affected by the disease, which can cause stooped posture, "dowager's hump," brittle limbs and loss of height. Each year about 200,000 American women break a hip because of osteoporosis, and complications resulting from these fractures are now the nation's twelfth leading cause of death. Much can be done to prevent the disease, including proper diet, calcium supplements, regular exercise and reduced smoking and alcohol consumption. Such a prevention program should be undertaken under a physician's guidance.

The principal concerns of older Americans are almost identical to those of other age groups, a survey taken by the National Council on Aging found. People of all ages worry about crime, not have enough money, and poor health. One difference was that older citizens cited loneliness as a concern, while younger people worried more about their careers.

COMSAT must convince no danger exists

'WE'RE NOT convinced that there's a black and white on the safety issue,' says county Planner Russell Lambert.

And therein lies the task ahead for Communication Satellite Corp. (COMSAT) — to convince the planning commission and board of supervisors that no health danger is posed by a planned expansion of its Jamesburg Earth Station on 162 acres in the Cachagua area deep in Carmel Valley.

The planning commission will meet again Oct. 30 to determine whether to certify the environmental impact report (EIR) for the proposed expansion.

If the EIR is certified planners will then discuss whether to recommend that supervisors issue a use permit for the expansion.

According to the staff report, COMSAT has asked for:

- A 105-foot-diameter parabolic dish antenna mounted on a 20-foot pedestal.
- A 62-foot-diameter parabolic dish antenna.
- The addition of 24,700 sq. ft. of building space for the mechanical and electrical equipment needed to service the antennas.
- Three 45-foot-high rectangular multi-beam antennas.
- Grading and improving 1,200 feet of access road to the facility.

The supplemental environmental impact report for the project claims that the additional microwave radiation to be generated by the expansion does not pose a significant health hazard.

However, Lambert said that staff remains unconvinced that the additional facilities are harmless. "It's a shade of grey," he said.

In the report signed by Planning Director Robert Slimmon, staff recommends certification of the EIR but does not take a position on the use permit application.

"Staff would consider a recommendation for approval of the use permit except that there appears to be no absolute or certain safety limits in the studies of microwave radiation hazards and their effects on humans and wildlife," the report states.

The planning commission originally was to conduct a public hearing on the EIR and use permit proposal Oct. 9, but continued the application to Oct. 30 because of inadequate review time for the environmental impact report.

Actually, the Carmel High School cheerleaders will wash anything on wheels during their fund-raising event from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 19 at the high school parking lot. Price is just $3 per car. Larger vehicle fees will be set by haggling. The fund-raiser is to help offset the costs of accompanying the varsity basketball team to a hoop tournament in Hawaii. At the same time, the squad's two All-Americans, Brenna Gardner and Lori Palma, will perform at the Aloha Bowl football contest in Honolulu, Hawaii Dec. 28. (Photo by Deidi Kramer.)

Aquarium celebrates first birthday

By ANNE PAPINEAU

THE MONTEREY Bay Aquarium, one year and 2.3 million visitors the wiser, will be the focus of a Cannery Row-wide anniversary party on Sunday, Oct. 20.

The aquarium end of the row will be closed to traffic to make way for music, street entertainers and contests, all in celebration of the $50 million aquarium, which opened Oct. 20,

ARTS & LEISURE

1984 in the footprint of the old Hovden Cannery.

The aquarium is already a fixture if not the star of that stretch of shoreline that once was indeed a home to sardine canning factories.

"Things have gone remarkably smoothly," observed aquarium public relations manager Hank Armstrong in reference to year one. Armstrong spoke within earshot of waves crashing into a tide pool engineered not by nature, but by Monterey Bay Aquarium designers.

The thoroughness of pre-planning is reflected in the virtually glitch-free first year logged by this state-of-the-art facility. The 335,000-gallon kelp forest, for example, a neck-craning exhibit that can be viewed from

LARGE SHARKS, octopi, salmon, striped bass and other open-ocean fish roam the 90-foot-long Monterey Bay Exhibit at the Monterey Bay Aquarium. Four different habitats create a cross section of the bay itself, from the deep reefs to the sandy seafloor, the shale reefs and finally the wharf. (Photographs courtesy the Monterey Bay Aquarium).

the Monterey Bay Aquarium. Living otters cavort in a dual-level tank at right.

three levels, is home not only to many of the large fish and kelp placed there, but also "well over 40 species of algae," Armstrong said. "It's turning into an increasingly complex habitat."

"The exhibits have matured; they're living exhibits," he noted.

However full the measure of technical and biological brainpower invested in a project or exhibit, there are still those elements that defy the game plan. That's why you probably won't see many bat rays in the 326,000-gallon Monterey Bay tank.

"The octopus was eating the bat rays. We thought it would be satisfied with the crab found in the tank, but it was also eating the bat rays. We're still working on that problem," Armstrong said.

Visitors who miss the presence of bat rays in that exhibit will still be able to try and pet the often elusive creatures in the bat ray touch pool.

BUILT WITH a $50 million gift from David and Lucile Packard, the non-profit aquarium is now self-sustaining. Business sponsorships, building rentals, admission and membership fees, proceeds from gift store and restaurant sales support the aquarium. Some 4,100 Carmel households, for example, are registered as aquarium members.

Its 23 galleries and exhibits continue to evolve not only through nature's helping hand, but also by human design.

An example is the tankful of frisky market squid, "collected by fishermen a week and a half ago."

"We often get 'fleeting exhibits,'" Armstrong pointed out. "The husbandry department might go out in search of something and come back with something different. It's like Christmas around here."

Familiar to repeat visitors are the sea otters that seem to continually play in — some might call it ravage — their 55,000-gallon habitat.

"We tried putting some anemones in there, and the otters tore those off pretty fast. We plan to install some sacrificial acrylic panels in the otter tank as protection for the original windows," Armstrong said. "We've tried buffing out the scratches made by the otters, but it's a very tedious process."

Not simply alterations, but additions of new exhibits are scheduled to take place at the aquarium in the coming years.

The commodious second floor is to be the site of an oceanography exhibit. The Monterey submarine canyon, deeper than the Grand Canyon in Arizona, will be the subject

Whale of a party planned on Cannery Row

THE MONTEREY Bay Aquarium is a year old only once, and in recognition of that fact Cannery Row will be the setting for an all-day birthday party.

The aquarium end of Cannery Row will be closed to traffic from noon to 8:30 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 20 for the Monterey Bay Aquarium's Anniversary Celebration. Contests, free music and live entertainment are among the scheduled activities.

In addition to street entertainers, members of the Pickle Family Circus will perform on stage at noon and 3:30 p.m. Touch tide pool exhibits staffed by aquarium guides will be outdoors from noon to 6 p.m.

Contests will put entrants to the test in several areas. An anniversary cake contest will be judged at 2:30 p.m., and the "Sea Star Strut," a costume contest with a marine bent, will be judged on stage at 1, 3 and 5 p.m. Both are open to all and entry forms are available at the aquarium or local libraries. For oyster fans, the Oyster Shucking Contest is at 1:30 p.m.

There's music with a Latin beat from 6 to 8:30 p.m., when the Brazilian samba band Escola Nova de Samba plays to the street crowd.

And the finale, fireworks visible from the front of the aquarium and Cannery Row, will begin at 7 p.m.

The shuttle will be running from the downtown Monterey parking garage from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., and all who can are urged to take advantage of it for convenient parking. The aquarium will be open as usual from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

In addition, coupons good for a discount on aquarium admission will be available free with a minimum purchase at participating Cannery Row businesses throughout the day.

Vienna Choir Boys pay Carmel a concert visit

A GLOBE-girdling contingent of choristers from Austria, the Vienna Choir Boys, will perform at Sunset Theater in Carmel on Wednesday, Oct. 23.

For nearly five centuries the Vienna Choir Boys have enchanted millions with the charm and excellence of their music-making. The traditions they preserve are not the dust-bound curiosities one finds in museums or libraries, but living, breathing manifestations of a noble heritage dedicated to continuing the glories of the past in today's too-easily jaded world.

The Vienna Choir Boys group was founded by imperial decree on July 7, 1498 by the humanist Emperor Maximilian I to fulfill his wish to have choristers in the imperial chapel. From its inception, this organization has attracted noteworthy musicians; Christoph Willibald Gluck, the founder of the modern operatic form, spent his most creative years as composer to the Hapsburg court in Vienna and wrote for the imperial chapel.

Mozart did the same on his promotion as composer to the court in 1787. Although Josef Haydn was not a member of the imperial chapel, he experienced the life of a choirboy to the full and many of his works are to be found in their repertoire. The greatest prodigy, and without a doubt the most famous choirboy, was Franz Schubert, who sang as a choirboy from 1808 to 1813. Anton Bruckner became organist of the imperial chapel in 1867 and added his influence to those of his equally illustrious precursors.

In 1918, however, it seemed that the collapse of the Hapsburg dynasty and the dissolution of the Austro-Hungarian empire would mean the end of the world-famous institution. Joseph Schnitt retained the chaplaincy of the imperial chapel and in 1924, encouraged by his many friends, he decided to re-found the boys choir.

It was felt that the boarding school method was the only practicable one of insuring the musical training necessary for the choristers and, despite enormous economic difficulties, the attempt was made. Schnitt spared no personal expense and he alone is responsible for the salvation of this aspect of Austrian musical tradition. What he began as an experiment has grown to be an enormous success and the Vienna Choir Boys, as they were now called, began to embark on concert tours around the world.

Anyone who has seen the boys, either in rehearsal or in performance, soon realizes the secret of their fascination: they have managed to combine the naivete of childhood with artistic maturity — something that can only be achieved through serious work. Those who wish to be considered for entry attend a special preparatory school where they receive a thorough education with special attention paid to the theory and practice of singing as well as instruction on one musical instrument. At the examination, which the candidates take at the age of nine, musical ability is the decisive factor, irrespective of creed or social standing.

More often than not two choirs are away on tour at the same time, with each tour lasting an average of three months. On such a tour the 24 choristers are accompanied by a choirmaster, a tutor and a nurse who are entrusted with their care and welfare. Since their first United States tour in 1932, the Vienna Choir Boys have visited America 39 times, have completed nine Asian tours — traveling as far as Japan — and have performed an equal number of times in Australia. They also have appeared numerous times in both South America and South Africa.

They have been received by innumerable heads of state, including audiences with popes Pius XI, Pius XII and Paul VI. The time lost on concert tours is more than compensated for by an intensive program of teaching and study in classes that seldom exceed 10 students. In the private school, which conforms to the standards set by the Austrian Ministry of Education, there is a staff of 30 fully qualified secondary school teachers.

Tickets to the 8 p.m. concert at Sunset Theater are $12.50 and $10. The theater is on San Carlos Street near Ninth Avenue in Carmel. For ticket information, call 624-3996.

RIGOROUSLY TRAINED according to centuries-old standards, the Vienna Choir Boys will perform at Sunset Theater in Carmel on Wednesday, Oct. 23. Concert time is 8 p.m. in the theater on San Carlos Street at Ninth Avenue. For ticket information, call 624-3996.

Workshop explains 'dreambodywork'

An orientation workshop to introduce "dreambodywork," a recent development springing from analytical psychology, is to be presented by the Monterey Peninsula Friends of C.G. Jung at 7 p.m. Friday, Oct. 25, at All Saints' Church, Ninth and Dolores, Carmel.

Titled "C.G. Jung and Dreambody — The Body's Role in Individuation," this experiential workshop will provide participants with firsthand knowledge of the dreambody concept. Known formally as Process-Oriented Psychology (POP), dreambodywork was originated by Arnold Mindell of Zurich, Switzerland, out of his work as an analyst and as a theoretical physicist.

He uses the term dreambody to mean the total, multi-channeled personality — "an information center asking you to receive its messages in many ways and to notice how its information appears over and over again in dreams and body symptoms."

Many of the case histories

he describes in his book, Working with the Dreaming Body, are accounts of his work with sick, aging and dying people. These attest to the growing realization that the body may contain the remedies for its own illnesses.

The staff of four dreambodywork practitioners who will present the workshop have undertaken the course of study under Dr. Mindell. A Monterey resident, Joseph Pagano, will moderate the program. His colleagues are Larry Bearg, Jan Dworkin and Adam Zwig, all of San Francisco.

Attendance is limited. The fee is $15. Other details and answers to questions may be had by calling 649-8809, or writing the Friends of C.G. Jung at 853 Pacific St., Monterey. Prior registration is necessary.

Substance abuse intervention taught

Ed Storti, intervention specialist, will conduct a free seminar on how to help a loved one with a drug or alcohol problem.

The program will be offered from noon to 1 p.m. Friday, Oct. 18 at Brightside ACT Center, Highway 1 between Carpenter and Ocean, Carmel.

Aquarium directs focus on research, education of an aquarium exhibit that will house deep-and mid-water creatures.

"Those exotic critters that live at the greater depths and bioluminescence will be the focus of that exhibit," he explained.

A macrovideo camera, developed by David Packard and operated by hand controls, is also on the installation list at the Monterey Bay Aquarium.

"The camera reflects our theme of interactive exhibits," Armstrong said. "Instead of just looking into a tank of water, people can move an underwater camera in the tank itself. It will show them on monitors what's under water — what an anemone looks like close up, for example."

EDUCATION AND research are both hallmarks of the Monterey Bay Aquarium.

In its first year, more than 70,000 children visited the facility in tour groups. Some 100,000 children are expected to do so during the second year of operation.

Both independent and co-research projects are in progress at the site. Assisting an organization called Sea Studios, the

'The octopus was eating the bat rays. We thought it would be satisfied with the crab found in the tank, but it was also eating the bat rays. We're still working on that problem.'

Monterey Bay Aquarium is at work videotaping life in the Monterey submarine canyon. A proposed BBC documentary that will ultimately air in this country is an expected offshoot of this research.

"Research will become a more and more important aspect of the aquarium," Armstrong confirmed.

To peninsula visitors and residents alike, the Monterey Bay Aquarium remains noteworthy as the place where they can gain a diver's eye view of the bay without wearing a wetsuit.

"Attendance dropped significantly after Labor Day," Armstrong said. "For members, this is the time to come."

The 2.3 million first-year attendance figure proved to be "way over predictions," he added. "We've had a huge first year."

Destructive sea otters and hungry octopuses aside, the aquarium staff had to grapple with the equally compelling problems of parking and crowding.

Visitors can now purchase aquarium tickets in advance, specifying day and hour of entry. In autumn and winter, advance ticket purchase is an option, but is a requirement during busy summer weekends. Advance tickets can be purchased through Ticketron or at the aquarium.

The Monterey Bay Aquarium staff advises using the free shuttle service offered by the City of Monterey to avoid traffic and parking delays. Visitors to the aquarium can park at the East Custom House garage on Tyler Street in downtown Monterey and hop the free shuttle (in operation weekends only during fall and winter and daily during summer).

The shuttle leaves every 15 minutes from 9 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. and stops at Fisherman's Wharf, Cannery Row and at the entrance to the Monterey Bay Aquarium. For shuttle or transit information, call 899-2555.

Aquarium admission and membership prices are expected to remain unchanged, at least for the coming year, Armstrong said.

The facility is open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily, except Christmas. Admission is $7 general; $5 to students and senior citizens (65 and over). Group rates are available by reservation. The reservations number is 649-3133.

For general information about the Monterey Bay Aquarium, call 375-3333.

TOUCH TANKS are where both children and adults can explore the soft underside of a chiton or the rigid arms of a starfish. An all-

MUSIC CORNER BY JO ANN LA TORRA

Musical marathon opens on peninsula

THE TOKYO String Quartet opened the Chamber Music series on Oct. 11, choosing Vienna as its locale, with quartets by Haydn, Schubert and Beethoven. The ensemble playing was very good and the musical conceptions consistent.

Haydn's appellation as father of the string quartet is only a slight exaggeration. He took the baroque trio sonata-as-divertimento, dropped the keyboard, strengthened the middle and presto — the classical quartet! Each group of his 83 quartets (usually in sixes) has a distinct personality.

Op. 76, belieing his age, are upbeat, even playful, works. The Tokyo Quartet chose an interpretation that emphasized the lighter qualities, and they brought off the tongue-in-cheek pseudo-minuet with mastery. The finale is also humorous, with its sudden and surprising interruptions. Haydn is one of music's greatest wits and it never pays to underplay this element, although audiences are reluctant to laugh.

Schubert's Op. 29, A minor, was given a properly lyrical reading and any problems probably have to do with Schubert's difficulty in managing large forms. He does tend to wander a bit. The minuet movement is really closer to the Austrian laendler, and it is a real problem to find a suitable tempo. The marking of allegretto is no help at all — "a little allegro." Slightly allegro? A small allegro? Moderately joyful?

At last count, about a billion and a half words had been written about Beethoven's magnificent Op. 131, C sharp minor. It is not my intent to inflate further that number. It is enough to say that this is a difficult work, for players and listeners alike. Long as it is, it is a model of economy. If Beethoven had written it as part of Op. 18, it would have been twice as long.

The Tokyo group played it creditably, but I had the feeling it was new in their repertoire. It doesn't yet plumb the depths. It would be interesting to hear it again in a year.

Their encore served admirably to illustrate some objections to encores. First, what can follow Op. 131? Op. 135, perhaps, or the Grosse Fuge. Their choice, the second movement of the Debussy Quartet (beautifully played), sounded like it wandered in from another dimension. The Debussy is a cyclic work and doesn't take well to dissection.

SATURDAY, Oct. 12, marked the season opening for Carmel Music Society, with another Carmel favorite, violinist Uto Ughi. Casting a spell over the audience with his sweet, sensuous tone and silken bow technique, Ughi demonstrated thorough mastery of his instrument. His playing is warm, lyrical, very Italian.

The centerpiece of the program was Beethoven's "Kruetzer" Sonata, Op. 47. Ughi chose to make the third movement climactic, playing the first movement with emphasis on the melodic lines, and the variations in a rather matter-of-fact manner. He opened up in the finale, producing a very exciting finish.

Four pieces by Dvorak benefitted from Ughi's warmth and lyricism. The Leclair sonata, on the other hand, would have been more stylish with less vibrato, different bowings and more pronounced rhythms. Likewise, Stravinsky's transcription of Pulcinella emphasized long lines rather than dance rhythms.

Ughi closed with the popular caprice of Paganini, "La Campanella." Whereas most violinists like to let us know how difficult this piece is, Ughi made it look easy, the only little hint at the difficulties being an occasional lapse in intonation.

Opera to be staged

Samuel Sanders provided solid assistance at the piano, but one often wished he would step out of the assistant's role and assume full partnership, especially in the Beethoven. That is one of the pitfalls of not having a permanent duo.

In sonatas, of course, both or neither should memorize. A piano duet team would look strange if one played with the music and one without; it tends to imply solo/accompanist. Ughi also, perhaps unconsciously, often placed himself between pianist and audience. A lot of pianists wouldn't sit still for that.

CLARK SUTTLE and the Monterey County Symphony presented their opening concert on Oct. 13 at King Hall in Monterey to a standing ovation. Although it was a good beginning, the standing ovation was premature. It is unfortunate that American audiences stand, stamp their feet, call "Bravo" at almost every concert for then, when something truly great comes along, we are out of adjectives and antics.

The program opened with the overture to La Forza del Destino of Verdi; the Nielsen flute concerto followed; the concert closed with Dvorak's popular Symphony No. 9, "From the New World."

It was a pleasure to hear the Nielsen concerto. This unfortunately neglected Danish composer had an interesting musical language, solidly in the Germanic post-Romantic, chromatic style, but much less dense and turgid than Reger, his close contemporary. Julius Baker soloed with his usual efficient mastery. One might have liked a bit more excitement.

The program showcased conductor and orchestra, from the sudden mood swings of Verdi to the expansiveness of Dvorak. There were a few problems, to be sure — occasional sloppiness in the strings, some stridency in parts of the brass section. There was also some beautiful wind playing and a lot of infectious enthusiasm.

Suttle draws a full, big sound from the orchestra and I was again impressed with his attention to the bass and what a difference this makes to the ensemble. He is not afraid to let the bass part ring out, nor is he afraid of quick tempos.

This is a young orchestra and a young conductor. If their energies aren't dissipated by other commitments, they may yet earn that standing ovation.

YMCA offers range of motion class

A Range of Motion (ROM) dance class is forming now, sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula YMCA. The program provides an enjoyable and relaxing alternative to traditional daily exercise and rest programs for many arthritis patients.

Participants are taught to perform basic range of motion in slow, relaxed surroundings. They develop awareness of postural alignment and body parts, diaphragmatic breathing and use of imagery and visualization.

The program is made up of two parts — the ROM dance sequence and relaxation and pain management techniques. The flowing progression of movement is accompanied by prose and music and takes less than 10 minutes to perform as a daily exercise routine.

The class will be taught by Kay Lee, a registered occupational therapist. It will take place at the Monterey YMCA, 600 Camino El Estero on Wednesday, Oct. 23 and Tuesdays thereafter, on Oct. 29, Nov. 5 and 12 from 1 to 2:30 p.m. Register by calling Matt King at the YMCA at 373-4116.

Lynn Lupetti creates her own world of magic

By ANNE PAPINEAU

1985 HAS represented a year of "quantum leap" for Carmel artist Lynn Lupetti.

As delicate in appearance as any of her fantasy-spun paintings, Lupetti has for several years conducted a search for self and meaning. The fruits of this internal pilgrimage have proven two-fold, she explains, and are reflected in paintings that exhibit enhanced artistic depth and a new Carmel gallery that bears her name.

The Lynn Lupetti Gallery on Sixth Avenue will celebrate its grand opening Saturday, Oct. 19. "I got into the gallery with the delusion that I wouldn't be at all touched with the business end," Lupetti observed from the Carmel home where she devotes 10 and 12-hour days to painting. "But I found myself very much involved in it, from choosing wall coverings to watering the plants."

"I found every time you crawl beyond what you think you can do, everything else

'When I finally achieved a degree of self-sufficiency, I realized you don't have to give away any of the magic of your childhood. Magic, purity and innocence are among the finest qualities of life.'

will rise to that same degree. I've found my paintings have become deeper of color. I've made a quantum leap into a lot more of life."

The artist's help-mate in this project is her husband since last March, Ed Lohmann. Ed oversees the "business side" of the new gallery, while Lynn directs her focus on its art.

"Ed has an incredible respect," she explained. "He definitely does not interfere. He inspires me totally with the love and devotion he gives."

Lupetti's reputation is built on paintings that show a magical, mystical world whose chief occupants are children. Her images of children, bathed in sunlight and serenity, display a highly evolved view of the world of fantasy. The knights on horseback that step from a little boy's storybook in The Enchanted Knight are as painstakingly drawn as the child who observes them. Imagination never takes a back seat in a Lupetti painting.

"The reason why I paint what I paint is that when I was a child I used to see the Magic People," Lupetti said of those tiny figures that punctuate her work. "They were my fantasy. I'd see them in a sort of a dream state, but of course they weren't there. My mom explained they were in my imagination so I set them aside to grow up. It was very painful for me to do that."

"When I finally achieved a degree of self-sufficiency, I realized you don't have to give away any of the magic of your childhood. Magic, purity and innocence are among the finest qualities of life," the artist observed.

It was by a circuitous route that Lupetti was able to rediscover the magic of childhood. She majored in art at San Jose State University, but minored in sociology because of a desire to reach out and help others.

What Lupetti ultimately learned was that, "The best way to work with people for me is by painting them."

The artist pursued other careers for a time. Among her jobs were stewardess, secretary, office manager and photographer. "But always I was lost and lonely until I was able to paint from my heart."

"Often we will set up an idol superior to ourselves and never reach out for what we are," Lupetti noted. "My dream was a soulful longing; I could never be an artist. I looked at Vermeer and his lights and shadows. I looked at Botticelli and did everything but look inside at Lynn Lupetti. As I've done that, my work has become more powerful."

Lupetti works at the easel in her gallery window on weekends, and weekdays paints in her sunlit Carmel studio. Classical music, frequently one of Beethoven's nine symphonies, pours from stereo speakers.

"Those never get old," she said of Beethoven's symphonies. "They sound like your soul feels when you paint."

To begin one of her oil-on-linen paintings, Lupetti said she will usually take a child out for a day. She sketches and photographs the subject. "When I go to work, I paint what I've absorbed of the child."

Flowers from her own garden are the frequent models for detail-rich foregrounds and backgrounds.

"I love my work. It isn't work. It's direct contact with my soul," Lupetti stated.

The "magic people," whether a prismatically-colored goddess in a flying chariot or tiny revelling gypsies, "are the seeds of dreams."

"They are precisely done with fine, fine brushes," she explained. "They're there to remind us where creativity comes from. If we kept setting aside that magic we would live in a drab world."

The spirit of Lupetti's art represents ideals she strives for in her own life.

"We have to try to maintain, in a sense, honesty, purity, playfulness, openness. If you stay open, stay new — you'll stay young. We do need to become responsible and self-sufficient. Yet we see children play and we long for that. I paint children not only because they're wonderful but because they're the purist part of ourselves."

Lupetti has resided on the peninsula, first in Carmel Valley and now in Carmel, for a decade. She calls Carmel "the prettiest place in the world," but also admits to a fondness for travel.

"I definitely want to be able to get to the point of living and working in Paris, and also to spend a couple of months painting in Japan," she said.

"Portugal is the next place I want to go. I do love to travel, there is so much magic on this planet, it's like a candy box."

The Monterey Peninsula remains, however, "a center for magic. Magic exists all the time. The sunset is magic. The hummingbird is magic. The monarch butterfly ly landing on a rose is magic."

The opening celebration for the Lynn Lupetti Gallery will take place 5 to 9 p.m. Saturday. The gallery is on Sixth Avenue between Dolores and Lincoln streets. For show information, call 624-0622.

MAGIC PEOPLE populate The Golden Flute, a 30-by-24-inch painting that reflects Lynn Lupetti's whimsical style and subject matter. Other featured artists at the new Lynn Lupetti Gallery are Bob Boomer, Lesley Harrison, Frank Loudin and John Soderberg.

Memorial exhibit will honor Jack Laycox

IMPRESSIONIST ARTIST Jack Laycox, a Carmel resident who died earlier this year, will be paid tribute during a memorial show at Gallery Americana Saturday, Oct. 19.

An opening reception is planned 4 to 7 p.m. at the gallery, on Sixth Avenue at Lincoln Street in Carmel.

"In every painting I complete," Laycox explained, "I attempt to maintain the highest standards of integrity in presenting my style, as part of an overall body of work through the years."

In this memorial show, Gallery Americana and the Laycox family will pay tribute to the artist's extensive "body of work" by presenting a wide spectrum of Laycox accomplishments. Included in the show will be a memorabilia exhibit as well as a representation of works from his early and middle periods.

Although Laycox lived in Carmel, he spent many years travelling around the world gathering background material for his paintings.

"I must have been there to properly present my interpretation and emotions," Laycox stated. "The true effort of a painter should be, in the best terms possible, to interpret a given subject with the full emotion that he feels about the subject."

The Laycox list of accomplishments includes honors, museum shows, gallery exhibitions, encyclopedia listings and tributes from collectors around the world.

"The nature the creative process requires that one 'live with his work,' and in doing so, work and paint at proper emotionally creative periods. The final test for a painter is not the amount of time taken to produce the work, but the degree of true feeling the artist supplies in its execution."

For more information about this memorial show, call Gallery Americana at 624-5071.

THE IMPRESSIONISTIC paintings of the late Jack Laycox are part of the memorial exhibit prepared as a tribute by Gallery

Americana. An opening reception is planned 4 to 7 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 19.

Hand-tinted photographs shown at Friends gallery

AN EXHIBITION of photographs that incorporate hand-applied color at some point during the photographic process opens in The Friends of Photography Gallery on Friday, Oct. 18 and continues through Dec. 1.

A preview and opening reception are planned in the gallery from 8 to 10 p.m. Friday. The gallery is open from 1 to 5 p.m. daily.

Ever since the earliest period of photography's history, photographers have added color to their images for a variety of reasons and using a multiplicity of techniques. Early daguerreotypists applied small beads of paint as buttons or jewelry on the mirrored surface of their portraits, and portrait photographers like Mathew Brady subtly colored small portions of the clothing and faces of their formally dressed subjects.

Later in the 19th century, and on a more popular level, photographers colored their tints in a similar way. At times, however, these pictures were painted so heavily that the photographic image was obscured completely. Similar techniques producing hand-tinted and hand-painted images continued into the 20th century. While one motivation for these practices was to "dress up" photographs made for commercial clients, the color applied by these early photographers also resulted from a desire to obtain a part of reality that could not be achieved through the monochromatic processes.

The exhibition, The Colored Image: Hand-Applied Color in Photography, recognizes the increased activity in the genre during the past decade and highlights the work created in the past three years by 17 contemporary artists. The artists represented are Anne Barnard, Gloria DeFilippis Brush, Dennis Farber, Allan Chasanoff, Bayat Keerl, Kim Mosley, Patrick Nagatani and Andree Tracey, Ted Orland, Dan Powell, John Reuter, Holly Roberts, Linda Robbenolt, Gail Skoff, Evon Streetman, Frank Thomson and Arthur Tress.

The development of viable color processes in the 1930s and 1940s allowed photographers to make colored images without resorting to manipulative techniques, and the use of hand-applied color diminished. Interest in the technique re-emerged in the 1960s and 1970s as a part of the general exploration of alternative photographic processes. While some artists maintain an interest in enhancing the realistic qualities of the photograph, a stronger motivation comes from the artists' desire to gain personal and creative control over the essentially mechanical photographic process.

In addition to traditional hand-tinted images that utilize transparent color on the surface of the print in a manner similar to that used by the 19th century photographers, the

Tony Bennett's impressionistic paintings showcased in Carmel

A COLLECTION of paintings and lithographs by Tony Bennett (aka painter Anthony Benedetto) will be shown at Simic Galleries from Saturday, Oct. 19 through Nov. 4.

While Bennett has exhibited over the years in Chicago, London, Toronto, San Francisco, Los Angeles and other cities, this marks the artist's first one-man show in which all of the works are available for purchase.

Tony Bennett began his art studies in Manhattan while he was a high school student named Anthony Benedetto, and has continued to work with teachers such as John Barnicoat in London and Basil Balin in New York.

"Balin's a marvelous portrait teacher," Bennett said. "He teaches in the tradition of the Old Masters. Barnicoat taught me a lot about Impressionism. He showed me how Bonnard and Van Gogh painted."

The Bennett/Benedetto style runs to colorful, impressionistic canvases painted mostly from his surroundings. He particularly enjoys landscapes and has painted places as far-ranging as Japan and the south of France.

Mario Simic, president of Simic Galleries, says that 24 original paintings will constitute the Bennett show. Also available will be the newly published Elan Editions lithograph, South of France, a 12-color, hand-drawn lithograph of museum quality paper individually signed and numbered by the artist.

Tony Bennett, the singer, maintains a full schedule of performances throughout the year, but continues to paint every day. When he is on the road, he takes portable equipment which enables him to work in watercolor and gouache.

"There's a great similarity between art and music," Bennett said. "Line, color, form, movement, tension, these are words that apply to both singing and painting. The simple fact is that I like to sing and I like to paint, and I'm fortunate enough to be able to make a living doing the two things I love most."

Tony Bennett will be at Simic Galleries in Carmel for the opening of his exhibition on Saturday.

Simic Galleries are located at Sixth and San Carlos in Carmel. For details, call 624-7522.

Hernandez named museum director

JO FARB Hernandez, who has served as director of Santa Clara's Triton Museum of Art since 1978, has been named director of the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, according to Interim Director George DeGroat.

She will assume her duties as director of the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art on Dec. 2.

"I share the (Museum Association Board of Trustees) Search Committee's enthusiasm for our new director, Jo Hernandez, and I consider us fortunate in being able to attract someone with her capabilities," DeGroat said in announcing the appointment.

"It was apparent (during her interview) that her excellent academic background . . . her experience as director of the Triton Museum of Art over the past eight years, as well as two previous curatorial positions, have provided her with capabilities that would be of distinct advantage to the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art," said Search Committee Chairman Mary Kay Higgins in her report to the Museum Association's Board of Trustees.

Hernandez' education includes her graduation from the University of Wisconsin with a double major with honors and a Phi Beta Kappa, and graduation from the University of California, Los Angeles with an M.A. in folk art. She has remained active in educational circles through a variety of "guest lectures" in universities and museums throughout the United States.

ART NOTES

BY SAM COLBURN

Busting the Broncos of Western Art

WHETHER ONE could call it a movement or not is questionable, but a school of Western Art does exist. This phenomenon does not seem related to any of the various new expressions of our time.

It is not out of German Expressionism, Cubism, Color Field, Surrealism, Dadaism or Conceptualism. It is out of Frederick Remington, Charlie Russell and Will James. It is indeed the Western Experience exploited by Hollywood, those pioneers of the plains. One of the best movies I have seen about the West, The Immigrants, was made by Swedes.

Remington did sketches of trappers, cowboys and mountain men that had vigor and graphic interest; so did his bronze sculpture, but his painting was mundane. Will James did sketches of bucking Broncos and their momentary riders. They were loose of line and vigorous.

In our locale Jack Swanson brings color and feeling to his Western paintings, and we also have Will Bullas who is, at times, a comic surrealist of the West.

OVER AT the Pacific Grove Art Center are the results of its Central Coast Second Biennial Open Competition. It is a big show of drawings, paintings and sculpture. The range of imagery is really quite amazing, and I could not say that the judge, Professor Ralph Putzker, favored any particular approach.

Perhaps he does not like representational art as I did not see any such work there with the possible exception of a head in bronze, Laurie, by Deryl Smith. This sculpture is an eloquent expression of form and feeling. There is love therein.

Speaking of form and feeling, and not of this show in particular, a lot of artists apparently don't feel very good these days.

There is in this show sculpture in clay, bronze, cut-outs in wood, layered wood, plastic and wire, and painted cut-outs of wood that is a kind of bas relief.

In the painting and the drawing the imagery is satirical, metaphysical, abstract, surrealist, color field — in other words, varied, which makes for an interesting show and one that means that the area from which the work comes is not dominated by any particular school.

I found that a second-place award had been given to Self Portrait, Berkeley. This is a constructed painting. It has no organic form. On the other hand there is Woman with Pet and Rings. This work ebbs and flows. The color is rich, the oil is juicy.

I have no further comments on this show. It is large and I hope that you go to see it.

watercolors are concerned perhaps too much with the eye impact, and are perhaps dry emotionally.

During the month of October the Carmel Art Association is presenting in its galleries two one-man exhibits and a one-woman show in addition to the regular all-member offerings of painting, drawing and sculpture. The Beardsley Room is devoted to the new work of Alex Gonzales, and the Center Gallery to paintings by Keith Lindberg and sculpture by Suzanne Sable.

Alex Gonzales shows a great range of imagery. He is able, through various innovative techniques, to present his visual concepts in a mature form. There are a number of figures in this show consisting of a single shape against a solid field. These bodies are paper collage over cloth-bound board. They are all quite "jaunty."

His collage in which the whole surface is worked is not a random pasting of pieces of paper but the result of years of thinking about the picture area and the subtle relationship of the forms thereon. A fine example of this is Carnation. Alex has used photos in this work with some alterations from the original. You will find Daughters of the Revolution in this collage.

Over in the Century Gallery are oil paintings by Keith Lindberg, and little sculptures by Suzanne Sable which can properly be called macquette.

I did not find change in Keith Lindberg's paintings. They are brilliant in color, and the picture plane is thus enlivened. In Flat Lands and California Gold, I have a feeling of place. I liked a small oil, Beach Path, which is not high in color but good in impact and feeling.

Along one wall in the Center Gallery are the macquettes of Suzanne Sable. This is a very exciting little showing of models of large sculpture. These small shapes are placed in front of photographs of possible emplacements. One called Pelican is set on Lovers Point in Pacific Grove. These are all serious models and show she is rich in concept. I liked in particular Fecundity with its center form a golden egg.

Art group applications taken

The Carmel Art Association will conduct its annual jury for provisional membership on Wednesday, Nov. 13. Provisional membership is open to all professional artists living within a 35-mile radius of Carmel who have shown in two professional galleries and one competitive show.

Application forms are available at the Carmel Art Association Galleries, Dolores between Fifth and Sixth in Carmel.

Ongoing art classes continue

Jeanne Fosnot's ongoing workshop in portrait-figure painting, drawing and sculpture is offered from 1 to 4 p.m. Wednesdays in room 10 of Sunset Center, Carmel.

The workshop focuses on study of a clothed model with still-life set-up, and one three-hour pose. The class is open to all ability levels. Individual instruction is given if requested. Class size is limited to 12.

The fee is $20 for four weeks, plus a share of the model fee, or $6 per session, plus model fee. For details, call 659-4749.

ACROSS THE street at Margot's Cafe/Gallery there is a showing of the watercolors of Renee Eaton. There are many paintings, and I have heard people say they are too close together. I did not feel this way as the wall seems to become a mosaic. This is not necessarily a good point as a painting is supposed to stand by itself, but I found this net effect very intriguing.

Renee is abstract and I find the relation between the masses in the picture plane to be interesting graphically. The shapes in some of these watercolors are big but have a meaning. The meaning cannot be defined, but it is there. The relation between areas in any painting makes or breaks the work. These

About Bulls & Bears & Savings Bonds.

The stock market says that bulls are good and bears are bad. But if you buy U.S. Savings Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan, you can get the most out of both markets.

Rates are high during bull markets, so the variable interest rate you get on Bonds lets you share in those higher returns.

But if the bear takes over and rates fall, don't panic: you're protected by a guaranteed minimum of 7.5%.

Just hold your Bonds 5 years or more, and you can ride the bull and beat the bear.

life.

Kids do the cutest things with kittens and puppies.

They also do some very ugly things. Particularly when the child is too young to understand how much innocent play may frighten or injure an animal.

That's why parents should wait until their child is old enough before bringing pets into the home.

When the time comes, the Monterey County SPCA is an intelligent place to choose the right type, age and size of pet for your family. The Monterey County SPCA has dogs, cats and other pets of virtually every breed, all screened for health and temperament.

We only charge you a small fee. But we ask you to invest some serious thought.
